Coordination proposal not too far along

By Deb Gray and Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writers

Closer coordination of emergency communications in Lincoln and Lancaster County sounds like a proposal with obvious benefits.

But a year has passed since work began to combine police, fire, sheriff and ambulance communications, and while support is still strong for an integrated communications system, the project is not very far along.

Heads of all agencies involved say it would bring faster, more efficient and more accurate service to people in crisis. Critics contend that the plan is a "giant octopus," that it would not be more efficient or faster than the present system, but that it will be more expensive.

On the matter of expense, city officials and experts refused to give even a rough estimate of what the proposed system will cost.

"There's absolutely no way that anything can be said about cost until all the recommendations are in" around Jan. 12, said Randy Arno, director of the City-County Implementation Commission.

Taxpayers foot the bill

Whatever the cost, it will be paid partially by city and county taxpayers. Dr. J. W. Upright, chairman of the CCIC communications task force, said joint federal funds may be available to finance much of the move.

Arno said he had hoped that integration would have been completed last July. According to Police Chief George Hansen, a combined communications system may not begin until the 1977-78 fiscal year.

ADL Systems, a Boston-based subsidiary of the Arthur D. Little consulting firm, was hired in November for $57,700 to design a computer dispatch system for the police department, plus a co-located — not consolidated — communications center.

Arno said hiring ADL Systems has been a pilot project in joint federal funding. Six federal agencies are supplying most of the $57,700 through the Federal Resources Center in Kansas City.

Rather than making six different proposals, the city was able to make one proposal which was funded jointly. "This will be the first successful project in the whole nation to be funded in this way," Arno said.

Consultant necessary

"I didn't think a consultant was necessary at first," Arno said, "but as we get deeper into it I saw it was a very complex kind of thing and would require technical assistance."

According to Harry Poole, director of the ADL Systems study, co-location would initially involve the sheriff, the police and the Fire Department.

With co-location, each agency would move its equipment and personnel into one room. They would work together, but have separate dispatch operations.

Preliminary recommendations do not include ambulance dispatchers in the center because the city's ambulance companies are private businesses and their participation in a government-run facility on city property may be illegal.

Co-location was recommended over consolidation in May by the communications task force, Arno said, because no department was willing to surrender its authority to a completely consolidated center.

With co-location, there would be no change in total personnel. The only operational change initially would be the phasing out of all emergency telephone numbers except 911.

The fire department now operates the 911 all-emergency telephone switchboard, in the fire station at 18th and Q Sts. Different kinds of emergency calls — fire, death, injury, sickness, crime — come in on 911, then are switched to the appropriate agency for response.

The ADL Systems preliminary recommendations said, with co-location, the public should be encouraged to use 911 for all emergencies. Most people still use the seven-digit emergency numbers listed in the telephone book. The seven-digit numbers for fire and police emergencies would eventually be removed from the phone book.

Preliminary co-location recommendations suggest that the 911 switchboard be jointly manned by police, sheriff and fire personnel.

Efficiency disputed

Police Chief George Hansen said that if 911 became the only emergency number, the fire department could not handle the volume of calls.

Firemen who now operate the 911 switchboard say efficiency won't be improved by co-location. Fire alarm operator Gerald Terry said he wonders whether staffers who now answer calls in the police department could handle a "real emergency" as efficiently as firemen do now.

The police department uses both uniformed police and nonuniformed personnel in its dispatch operation.

Hobart Boswell, president of the firefighter's union, said a qualified operator needs "experience in the field, where you've worked with people in stress and trauma situations." Several years experience as a fireman is a requirement of a 911 operator under the present system.

Firemen also said the nature of police and fire department calls differ.

"Most police calls are 'after the fact' — a crime has been committed, and the police are called in to investigate it," Terry said. "But real emergencies — like a house on fire or a person having a heart attack — are life and death situations. They require an immediate, expert response."

"I don't care who answers the phone," Hansen said. "I want what's best for the community."

Johnson sees benefits

Fire Chief Dallas Johnson said that co-location will benefit all agencies involved, especially during a major disaster when communication between agencies is vital. "There will be times when we'll all be glad we're together," he said.

Lt. Pete Larrimer, director of the police communications center, also said that with all agencies in one room, interagency communication would be more effective. "With us all sitting side by side, there's bound to be less error and better coordination."

But fire alarm operator Dwayne Novak said communications in the center won't necessarily be any faster or more accurate than the present system. Each agency's dispatch personnel will still work separately, and will still talk to each other by phone, he predicted.

"It's easier for agencies to communicate by telephone than to shout across a noisy room," Novak said.

Israeli chief may lose job

Jerusalem (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin lost his majority in parliament Sunday by dismissing three cabinet ministers, and immediately faced a motion of no confidence that threatened to topple his government.

The three fired ministers were members of the National Religious party (NRP), the chief coalition partner of Rabin's Labor party.

The right-wing Likud opposition presented the no-confidence motion, and the NRP said it would support it in parliament when it comes up for debate Tuesday. Rabin's coalition could well lose a vote on the issue, requiring early elections.

Political analysts said this may have been Rabin's intention. They noted that general elections were scheduled for October and said the fall of the government would merely advance the election date by a few months.

Politicians on the right and left praised the move as good political tactics by the prime minister, calling it a pre-emptive attack aimed at hitting Rabin's foes before they were ready to go to the polls.

Rabin made no immediate comment on elections. He fired the three NRP cabinet ministers after two of them joined the NRP faction in parliament in abstaining on a vote of confidence last week.

The Torah Front, a splinter faction of ultra-orthodox rabbis, had presented the no-confidence motion because a welcoming ceremony for three F15 fighter planes from the United States continued past the beginning of the Jewish sabbath at sundown on Friday, Dec. 10.

Welfare Minister Zevulun Hammer, one of the dismissed ministers, said it was "inconceivable" Rabin would continue to govern with a minority and promised the NRP would "do everything to advance the election date."

The other two dismissed ministers were Interior Minister Yosef Burg and Religion Minister Yitzhak Raphael.

Diplomatic analysts thought early elections might speed up Middle East peace moves. The U.S.-sponsored peace efforts have developed slowly, partly because of the weakness of Rabin's cabinet and his disagreement with the NRP about how much captured Arab territory Israel should give up.

Rabin's move took the nation by surprise. As the prime minister was announcing his decision to the ministers, Israeli newspapers were reporting that he had decided to overlook the affair.

But Rabin told the cabinet, "The government cannot ignore its own self-respect, even if this involves hampering its parliamentary position," the state radio reported.

The NRP ministers' resignations, which were to be presented to parliament Monday, in effect broke up Rabin's coalition. The NRP has 10 seats in the 120-member parliament. Rabin's Labor party and its only remaining partner, the tiny Liberal party, now control 57 seats.

Astounded coach Cheryl White met Ernie at the top of the 22-inch high jump.

Hi, I'm Kite Jackson coming to you from the psychology lab at Nebraska Wesleyan University, where we've just witnessed the first of what's to be an annual event here: the Rat Olympics.

This unusual clash between the titans of Rodentland is the brainchild of psychology Prof. Marty Klein whose class in conditioning and motivation seemed to need a new twist. So he gave it just that.

"We normally work with pigeons on conditioned response," Klein said. "But this year we worked with the birds the first half of the semester and the rats the second half. The proficiency of the rat determined the final exam grade."

The project exploded to success. With eight events for 30 student coaches and 20 rats, the excitement couldn't have been keener for a Superbowl.

And here to bring you the wrapup is sportscaster Howverbos Cossell.

Goodday to you ladies and gentlemen. I'm bringing to you what has turned into an octathlionic extravaganza unsurpassed in rat-letics.

What, in sports, has become a study in commonality, an underdog — or might I say, underrodent — has pulled from the pack to dominate this magnificent competition.

Only a few weeks ago, this rat — affectionately named Ernie by its trainers, Cheryl White and Laura Eaton — was a stud, a veritable beach bum used for propagational purposes in a local laboratory rat production business.

But 8 a.m. that fateful Saturday brought him a new claim to fame: an ode to his courage and stamina.

With trust for his mentors and a reckless abandon, he set records in the high jump, the long jump and the tightrope walk to win three first place awards — a deed unequalled by the 19 other contestants.

The softspeaking Ernie had nothing to say. Unfortunately, an accident of birth robbed him of the power of speech. But his owners succinctly summed up their champion's grand showing: "Pure luck," they said simultaneously.

The other events, basketball, sprints, hurdles and the rope climb, became meager tidbits divided between a small group of also-rans. Only one competitor, Jesse Owens Rat, took two firsts and a second, reaching for the immortality the legendary Ernie already had captured.

Thanks Howverbos, Kite Jackson back again with the director of these events, Marty Klein.

Great games Marty.

"Thanks, Kite. It took a lot of effort on the part of the students, the staff who helped, and especially the rats."

What are your plans now doc?

"We hope to get a National Collegiate Ratletics Association together and challenge other Nebraska psychology departments to contests. We had some great showings here and I'm confident we can do well."

"The rules have been formulated but they're open to discussion. Each rat must enter three events at least."

"And it's not expensive. Each rat cost about $2 while there was about $40 in material for the events. So I'm looking forward to more competition next year."

Thanks Marty.

Lincoln pair killed in two-car crash

A Lincoln couple was killed early Sunday in a two-car crash at the junction of Hwy. 34 and 79 about six miles northwest of Lincoln.

The State Patrol said the car in which Frank Kohn, 36, and his wife, Gladys, 32, were riding was struck by a car driven by Richard A. Roberts, 17, of Malcolm.

The patrol said the Roberts' car was westbound on Hwy. 34, but it was uncertain what direction the car driven by Mrs. Kohn was traveling.

Roberts was listed in fair condition at Lincoln General Hospital with injuries suffered in the accident.

Kearney police said a one-car accident in Kearney late Sunday instantly killed an 18-year-old Kearney girl and seriously injured a 17-year-old boy. Their identities were withheld pending notification of relatives.

Officers said the boy was driving southbound on Lakeview Drive along Kearney Lake near the Kearney State College campus and apparently lost control as the car entered a curve. Police said the car failed to brake, jumped a curb, and plunged down an embankment where it struck a tree.

In a Friday accident northeast of Culbertson, Steven D. Geier, 16, of Culbertson was killed while he was a passenger in a car that apparently struck an embankment after leaving a country road.

In a separate Friday fatality in Omaha, LeRoy Backus of Omaha was killed when he was thrown from a semi-truck in which he had been a passenger.

Brokers' rules may increase

By Dick Holman
Star Staff Writer

To provide the public better protection and increase the competence of agents, the Nebraska Real Estate Commission will ask the 1977 Legislature to beef up training qualifications and licensing rules.

Paul Quinlan, commission director, said the 1973 law requires applicants for a real estate salesman's license only to be at least 19 years old and have a high school diploma or equivalency certificate.

The commission will propose additionally that applicants must take three courses in real estate subjects, to equal at least 90 in-class or correspondence study hours.

For a real estate broker license, an applicant now must have either served two years as a licensed salesman and completed 60 hours of real estate education, or — to skip the salesman category — have taken five college-level courses (180 in-class hours).

The Legislature will be asked to revise the law to require all broker applicants to have finished 180 hours of academically approved class time — no cram courses allowed.

"We lost a reciprocal agreement (honoring licenses) with Texas because Nebraska has lagged behind many other states" in real estate education requirements, Quinlan said.

The new mandatory broker training provision would put Nebraska up to an acceptable level, possibly allow reinstatement of the arrangement with Texas and prevent losing others, he said.

Ultimately, it would offer the public "much better prepared licensees to be handling their real estate transactions," which he said are usually the largest a family ever makes.

When the current law was passed, Quinlan said, real estate educational opportunities "were virtually nil" except at the University of Nebraska at Omaha. The law included a continuing education requirement of a 30-hour course for renewal of a salesman's license after two years in the field.

Courses were developed, with 75 now available statewide in community colleges, state colleges and by correspondence from the NU Extension Division. Thus Quinlan said the more restrictive training requirements proposed in the law could be conveniently met.

"This is a tremendous movement" for public protection, Quinlan said, most licensee-caused transaction problems aren't created because of willful wrongdoing, but rather by incompetence. Part of the problem has been the "practical matter" of no learning opportunities available until the past year.

The commission will also propose legislation to eliminate the requirement of dual licensing for brokers who prefer to operate as a partnership or corporation, Quinlan said. He cited no "real need" to hold a personal and a corporate license.

Pilot crashes football playoff

Baltimore (UPI) — A light plane buzzing Memorial Stadium crashed into the upper deck shortly after the Baltimore-Pittsburgh professional football playoff game Sunday, but the stands were empty and there were no reports of injuries to fans.

Baltimore police said the single engine Cherokee smashed into the stadium about 10 minutes after the fans had gone. Police said the condition of the pilot or whether the plane carried any passengers was not immediately known.

Bystanders reported the pilot escaped with what appeared to be minor injuries.

Witnesses said the plane entered the open end of the horseshoe-shaped stadium and tried to rise as it approached the closed portion.

The white and blue plane landed nose down in the upper deck just above the baseball press box which was being used as an auxiliary press facility for the American Football Conference game, won by the Steelers 40-14.

The left wing of the plane was shattered and police officers said they were investigating why the pilot was flying so low. Memorial Stadium is not near the airport.

Some 60,000 fans attended the game.

The pilot was identified as Don Kroner, 42, of the Baltimore area. According to Baltimore Colts' business manager Ed Rosenbloom, he had been buzzing Memorial Stadium for the past few days.

Rosenbloom said he reported Kroner's action's to the Federal Aviation Administration prior to the game.

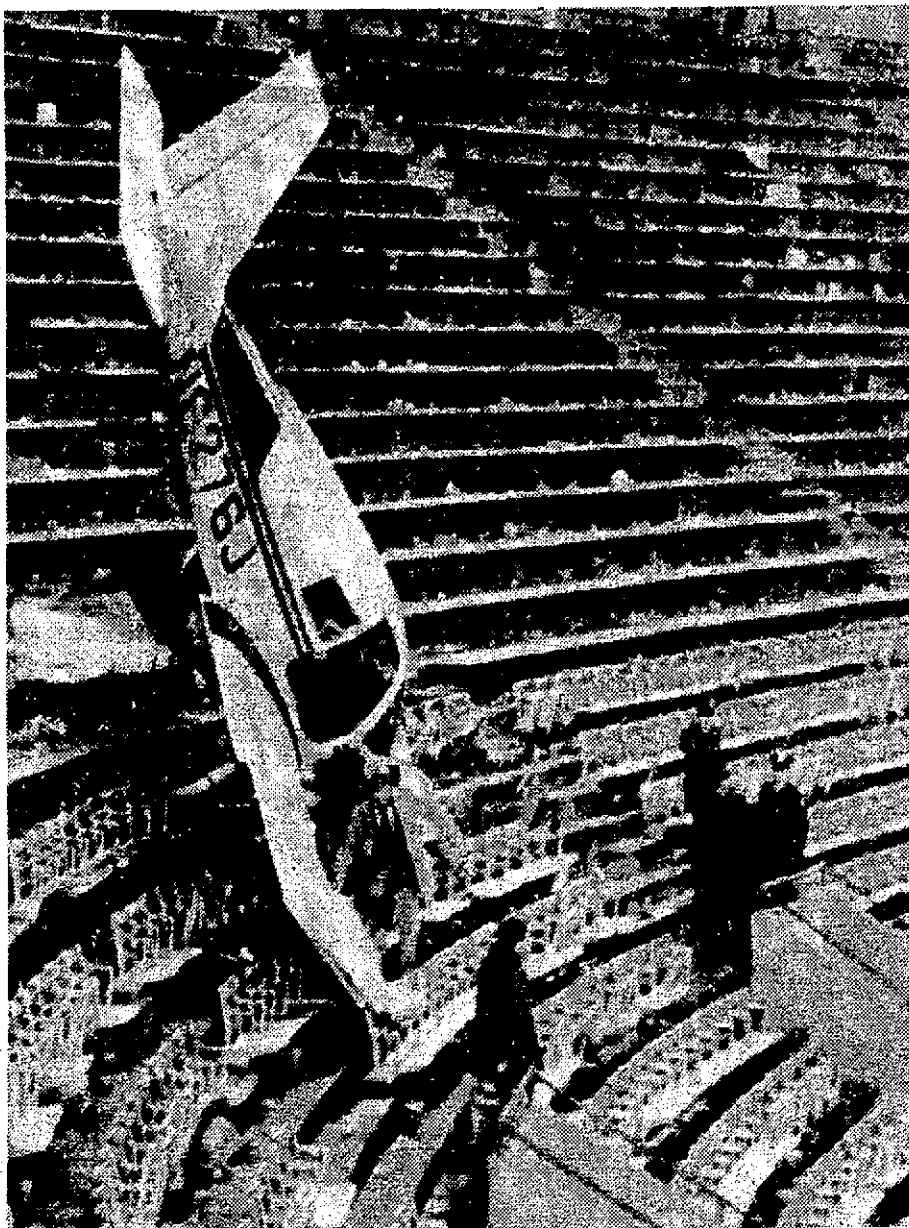

An FAA spokesman said they radioed Kroner during the course of the game, but got no answer.

The pilot made one pass over the field apparently wanting to land and then, seeing he was in trouble, tried to pull out, officials said.

The pilot was removed from the plane unconscious and bloodied and taken to a nearby hospital. However, officials at the scene said they did not think his condition was serious.

"The pilot made one pass around the stadium, came back the length of the field and came within 100 feet of landing on the field," said Dale Coleman, a fan from Baltimore.

"When he pulled up quickly, his engine stalled and he crashed into the upper deck on the south side behind the goal posts," Coleman said.

Plane stands tail up at Baltimore Memorial Stadium.

Birmingham, England (AP) — All the stray mutts at Birmingham Dogs' Home will enjoy a turkey dinner on Christmas Day, rounded off with dog chocolates.

The home's manager, John Goodhead, explained: "I shall be buying quite a few 20-pounders for the dogs. Why should they go without just because they have been dumped here?"

News offices taken over

Beirut, Lebanon (UPI) — Syrian paratroops Sunday occupied the offices of the independent daily newspaper An Nahar, the French language l'Orient-le Jour, United Press International and Newsweek.

"They told us we're not working tonight," one of An Nahar's editors said as machinegun-toting soldiers hustled him out of his office.

Ehrlichman to testify

Phoenix, Ariz. (UPI) — John Ehrlichman, serving a prison sentence for his part in the Watergate coverup, left Sunday on a flight to New York City where he will testify in a trial of another Watergate figure.

Ehrlichman was to testify Monday or Tuesday in the trial of Anthony T. Ulasewicz, a former New York City policeman alleged to have been the go-between in payment of money to burglars who broke into the Democratic National Committee headquarters at the Watergate complex in Washington.

Sadat, Assad confer

Cairo (AP) — Presidents Anwar Sadat of Egypt and Hafez Assad of Syria met for more than two hours Sunday to continue mapping strategy for pressuring Israel to attend a peace conference on Arab terms.

Newspapers in Damascus and Beirut said the talks, which began Saturday, are as important as the secret conferences in which the two leaders planned a surprise attack on Israel in October 1973.

Blacks not disappointed

Washington (AP) — Two black mayors said Sunday they were not disappointed that President-elect Carter had not appointed any blacks to the cabinet so far.

Kenneth Gibson of Newark, N. J., said "there are 11 major cabinet positions and only four have been filled. Mr. Carter has the opportunity to deal with that problem."

Coleman Young of Detroit said "when the 11 appointments are completed, there will be not only adequate, but satisfactory, representation of blacks."

Brezhnev showered with honors on 70th birthday

Moscow (AP) — The Kremlin celebrated Communist Party chief Leonid L. Brezhnev's 70th birthday Sunday with a shower of awards and accolades from his colleagues. World leaders sent congratulations.

Brezhnev, appearing fit and jovial, was honored at a ceremony followed by a luncheon banquet in the Kremlin where his achievements and character were praised.

Official media gave extensive coverage to the event, but the ceremonies were open to only a small group of Soviet leaders and invited Communist guests. The birthday was not marked by celebrations elsewhere in the country.

Leaders from every Soviet-bloc country were at the Kremlin. The award presentations, with Brezhnev receiving two medals and a sword, were televised throughout the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

Chilean Communist leader Luis Corvalan, freed by Chile's right-wing military regime in a prisoner exchange deal, was believed to be with his family in a country house outside Moscow. There was no indication that he attended the Kremlin functions. Corvalan was flown to Russia Saturday in return for the release of Soviet dissident Vladimir Bukovsky from a Soviet prison. Bukovsky is now in Switzerland.

Moscow sources reported a motorcade and Kremlin reception planned Monday for Corvalan. They said it was felt his appearance Sunday might detract from Brezhnev's celebration.

All Moscow newspapers ran special birthday editions with large portraits of the party chieftain who has headed the collective Kremlin leadership since Nikita S. Khrushchev's ouster 12 years ago.

Streams of congratulatory messages in the press included brief messages from President Ford, West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, Italian President Giovanni Leone, Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing.

Mikhail Suslov, the 74-year-old party theoretician, delivered a speech of congratulations at the banquet.

"Leonid Ilyich, you are invariably distinguished by such wonderful qualities as utter devotion to the interests of the people, firmness of principle, the ability to listen to opinions of comrades, Communist exactingness and intolerance to smugness, constant attention to everything that is new and progressive," Suslov said.

At the award ceremony, Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny, 73, pinned on Brezhnev his second Hero of the Soviet Union gold medal and a sixth Order of Lenin medal. Podgorny also presented him with a sword in recognition of "outstanding services in strengthening the defense capacity of the country."

Brezhnev grinned and recoiled in mock fright as Podgorny unsheathed the sword. In his acceptance remarks, Brezhnev noted the party's success and pledged, "We will firmly follow this course in the future."

Bukovsky attacks Soviet maneuver

Bukovsky (left) weeps as he is welcomed by exiled writer, Levitin Krasnov.

Zurich, Switzerland (AP). — Vladimir Bukovsky, the Soviet human rights activist freed in an international exchange of political prisoners, said Sunday that prison life got much rougher after the Helsinki accord on East-West cooperation was signed.

Denouncing the Soviet system, the 33-year-old dissident attacked the 1975 Helsinki accord as a Soviet maneuver to disarm the West and curb the fight for human rights in Russia.

The pale and haggard Bukovsky told his first news conference in the West he intends to dedicate all his energy to the cause of political prisoners in the Soviet Union and throughout the world.

Bukovsky said conditions at Vladimir prison, 120 miles east of Moscow, "worsened considerably as soon as the Helsinki accord was signed." He said this included new restrictions on reading matter for prisoners, who were even barred from reading western Communist publications and an official United Nations review.

"The Soviet Union still sees the West as an enemy with which it is in a state of belligerency," he declared.

Bukovsky, his mother, his sister and an ailing nephew were flown to Switzerland by the Kremlin on Saturday in exchange for Chilean Communist party leader Luis Corvalan, who had been in prison since the Chilean military overthrew the late President Salvador Allende in 1973.

The exchange was "an extraordinary event because it is the first time that the Soviet Union officially recognized it has political prisoners," Bukovsky said. "It is a victory for everybody. This exchange brings forward the problem of political prisoners as a universal problem."

Corvalan, who was freed Friday by the military regime in Santiago, flew on to Moscow with his wife Saturday night in the unprecedented exchange assisted by the United States.

Chile's president, Gen. Augusto Pinochet, said in Santiago Sunday his government had taken the initiative in asking the United States to mediate. The Russians, he said, "responded in evasive and distant terms" to the early Chilean approaches, but later came around.

A Swiss physician said Bukovsky was underfed and had an accelerated heartbeat, but was otherwise in "surprisingly good health."

Bukovsky, a veteran of the Soviet human rights movement, has spent 10 of the past 15 years in Soviet prisons or under treatment in psychiatric clinics, which he said was a standard Soviet method of silencing regime critics.

The treatment of political prisoners includes brainwashing and near-starvation diets "to change their attitude," he said.

He said that since 1974, he had been put on a "severe regime" diet three times for periods of six months, involving reduced food rations, with hot meals and one pound of bread only every second day.

A Soviet secret police instruction, "Number 025" of 1975, he said, linked the size of food rations to the severity of the crime.

He said underfed prisoners were supposed to do hard labor "which even a well fed, healthy prisoner would find hard to perform."

He said the Helsinki agreement signed by President Ford, Soviet Communist Party chief Leonid Brezhnev and representatives of 33 other countries gave the Soviet Union hope for "unilateral disarmament on the part of the West" while keeping Western human rights campaigners from what Moscow considers interference in its domestic affairs.

In return for tacit Western recognition of Europe's post-World War II borders, the Soviet Bloc reluctantly accepted the accord's so-called "Basket Three." This aimed to increase the free flow of peoples and ideas between East and West.

Bukovsky, wearing an oversized black suit given him in Moscow and a shirt with no tie, faced more than 100 reporters and cameramen at the news conference arranged by Amnesty International, the London-based agency which has fought most actively for his release.

Tense and looking drawn under the glare of television lights at first, he later broke into occasional smiles. He answered most questions in Russian through interpreters.

Asked whether he had any message for Brezhnev on his 70th birthday Sunday, Bukovsky grinned and replied: "Exchange Brezhnev for Pinochet."

Bukovsky said his being exchanged for Corvalan was "not a trade in human beings but a fair exchange, and I am very happy about it."

He said he was handcuffed until the special plane that brought him to the West left Soviet airspace. A deputy chief of the Soviet KGB secret police accompanied him on the jetliner, Bukovsky said. The KGB official informed the dissident that, unlike Alexander Solzhenitsyn, he was "not deprived of Soviet citizenship" but was given the five-year passport normally handed to Soviet nationals permitted to travel abroad.

"Presumably, I am to consider myself a political prisoner on leave," he commented with a smile. Asked whether he intended to go back, he replied, "I hope that one day, I will be able to return."

He said his immediate plans depend on the condition of his 12-year-old nephew, who has been hospitalized at Zurich. He had undergone surgery for a blood ailment in a Moscow hospital.

Bukovsky said he intends to visit England in response to an invitation by British actor David Markham, and the United States, "to thank all those who helped me."

Markham, who came to Switzerland to welcome Bukovsky, at one time had tried to secure Bukovsky's release by asking Soviet permission to adopt him as his son. He and his wife, author Olive Pehn, will have Bukovsky at their country farmhouse in Sussex.

Miss Pehn said in London they hope that on his 34th birthday, Dec. 30, Bukovsky will join her husband at a vigil the actor stages each year outside the Soviet Embassy in London to publicize Bukovsky's case.

Peron finally goes to cemetery grave

Buenos Aires, Argentina (AP) — Argentine strongman Juan D. Peron was finally buried Sunday in a local cemetery, almost 2 1/2 years after his death.

The military regime now in power apparently hopes that the Peronist movement, which dominated the country's political life for more than 30 years, has been interred with the coffin.

Peron's dark wood coffin, with his army general's cap and sword resting on top, was taken out of the presidential residence on the outskirts of the capital early Sunday. The white ambulance transporting the remains was escorted to Chacarita cemetery by four automobiles filled with security agents.

The body of Peron had been resting in a special crypt within the grounds of the residence since his death from a heart attack in July 1974, while he was serving his third term as president of Argentina.

The body of his second wife Eva — who died from leukemia at the age of 33 in 1952 — had been placed by his coffin for a time.

Eva's body was removed by the military in October and placed in a family mausoleum in another Buenos Aires cemetery.

Gen. Jorge Videla, Argentina's army chief and president of the junta that has ruled Argentina since deposing President Isabel Peron — Peron's third wife — last March 24, resides at a local army base instead of the presidential residence.

Globs of oil moving toward fishing area

Boston (AP) — Up to 1.5 million gallons of oil which spilled from a grounded tanker was moving in globs as large as 1,000 square feet toward the rich Georges Bank fishing grounds Sunday. The Coast Guard moved in equipment to unload millions of gallons of heavy industrial oil which remained aboard the vessel.

The unloading operation could take as long as a month because of predicted intervals of severe weather. Officers have expressed concern that high winds and rough seas could break the ship apart before it can be completely unloaded.

The Coast Guard said Sunday that as much as 20 per cent of the 7.6 million gallons loaded aboard the 640-foot Argo Merchant might have escaped the vessel, grounded on shoals 27 miles southeast of Nantucket Island.

That estimate was significantly higher than the 100,000 gallons that officers on Saturday said had leaked out of the stricken vessel in what was declared a major spill.

Capt. Lynn Hein, Coast Guard officer in charge of operations at the scene, said unloading can not begin for several days because the ship must be stabilized and the oil will have to be heated in order to be pumped from the tanker into barges for carrying ashore.

The No. 6 oil is currently the consistency of chocolate pudding because of cold weather, Hein said.

The spilled oil was in a wedge-shaped area extending 65 miles eastward from the ship. The 35-mile-wide wedge was about 40 miles west of Georges Bank on Sunday.

"We don't know how much is on the surface and how much might have gone to the bottom," said Rear Adm. James Stewart, commander of the 1st Coast Guard District. "Experts tell us sand in the water may carry oil to the bottom."

Several species of fish which inhabit the bank area are bottom feeders, which biologists said would probably be poisoned by the oil.

No oil had hit the New England coast by Sunday, and Stewart said experts predicted that the oil which leaked out would approach no closer than 20 nautical miles.

The weather Sunday was calm, with winds of 10 knots and seas about four feet.

A six-man Coast Guard team aboard the Argo Merchant installed two-ton "Yokohama fenders" around the ship Sunday to make it easier for other vessels to approach. A steam generator, which will be used to melt the oil, was being loaded in Narragansett Bay, R.I.

"Our plan is to place the heater in one of the center tanks and pump unheated oil from other tanks to that one. We hope three or four smaller pumps can keep up with one big pump in the center tank," Hein said.

Two barges, which can hold a combined total of 4.7 million gallons, will be used to shuttle oil ashore, Hein said.

Flu program expires after long illness

The demise of the swing flu immunization program is hardly surprising. No other public health venture has been so ill-starred from the outset.

Charges that the mass immunization plan was politically-inspired immediately cast doubt upon it. At the same time, some medical authorities asserted the program was unnecessary, that there was no threat to justify it. Then drug and insurance companies argued the liability angle. Only the outbreak of "Legionnaires Disease" in Philadelphia prompted congressional action to fund the President's program. At last off the ground, it was met with widespread public apathy.

Ford and the public health officials who recommended the program had hoped that almost the entire American population of 215 million could be vaccinated against the swine flu strain which killed millions in the worldwide pandemic following World War I.

By the time the program received what may be its death blow — the outbreak of a rare paralyzing disease among some who had been immunized against swine flu — only a little over one-sixth of the population had taken the flu shots.

The spotty incidents of the paralyzing disease — which so far has reportedly killed six or more people — has, health officials predict, broken the back of what public confidence remained in the mass immunization against swine flu.

And even if there were large numbers of Americans who still wanted to receive the protection against swine flu, the suspended program could not be resumed, it is said, until mid-January, a time too late to be effective against a winter epidemic.

All the factors combined, with public apathy caused by lack of a perceived serious health threat chief among them, has spelled doom for what we think was a sincere and justified effort to try to spare thousands and perhaps millions of Americans misery, illness and death. If an epidemic does yet break out, it will be a tragic price to pay for apathy.

The lack of success of the swine flu immunization program also poses serious questions about the nation's ability at this juncture to practice preventive medicine on a mass scale. The lack of a well-defined health threat which people have experienced is one obstacle. The lack of cooperation among the medical community, insurers and drug manufacturers is another.

In some respects, this is a lesson in failure which has frightening implications.

Bar lame duck trips

State Sen. Harold Simpson, who last month won election to a six-year term on the Nebraska Public Service Commission (PSC), has submitted expense vouchers totaling $465 for a trip to the National Convention of the Council of State Governments at Lake Tahoe, Nev., Dec. 24.

Simpson, who soon resigns his 46th District seat to assume the $20,000 per year PSC post, defends the propriety of the state-financed, post-election Tahoe trip. "I'm still a member of the Legislature," Simpson says. "I don't know how anybody could question anything I'm elected to and I went there and participated on the Legislature's behalf."

Simpson received the okay for the trip from Sen. Wally Barnett, chairman of the Unicameral's executive board, who also ran Simpson's PSC campaign. Barnett and defeated Sen. George Syas of Omaha had considered going to Lake Tahoe but because of Syas' lame duck status, Barnett said, they decided "it would be best if we just didn't go." The question thereupon is posed, if it looks bad under the circumstances for lame duck Syas to go on a post-election trip at taxpayer expense, why does it look any better for lame duck Simpson to go?

Simpson believes the trip was proper and that the Legislature benefitted from his representation at the Nevada meeting. We're not quarreling with the sincerity of that belief.

We are suggesting that expense-paid trips by lame duck public officials — whether they achieve that status through voluntary retirement, losing an election or winning election to another office, as Simpson did — are of dubious value to the taxpayer.

There is a movement afoot in Congress to bar lame duck members of the House and Senate from taking post-election trips at public expense. That rule should apply to lame duck officials at all levels of government.

And Simpson needn't worry about losing an opportunity for representing Nebraska on the road. The PSC takes dandy trips. Commissioners returned last month from a national Association of Regulatory and Utility Commissioners (NARUC) annual meeting in Honolulu. Next year NARUC meets in San Juan, Puerto Rico. Those regulators sure know how to plan a convention.

"JUST FILL AS MANY REQUESTS AS YOU CAN, AND SEND THE REST ALONG TO JIMMY CARTER"

Andrew Young, our man at U.N.

On Target

By Don Walton

All right, Prez-elect!

Now you're acting more like you talked before you were elected. Andrew Young for United Nations ambassador. That's a change. And, presumably, most Americans (but not many more) voted for a change when they chose Jimmy Carter over an incumbent President last month.

Maybe now we'll have someone who will talk to and listen to Third World nations at the UN instead of someone assigned to scold them and act indignant whenever they pick on us.

Poor defenseless rich guy. As the most conspicuous of the "have" nations, we ought to expect and understand the anger and envy which are sometimes directed our way.

We can take it. And, to suggest otherwise, as we sometimes have, is to sell our own strength short.

We ought to see what we can do to legitimately help nations who need assistance — and there are plenty of them — rather than retreat to the abused fortress mentality displayed by the outraged political character actor who used to represent us at the United Nations.

(A pause for the boo's to subside.)

Pat Moynihan may have been a hero in the United States, but he didn't do much for the American image elsewhere.

When he was succeeded by William Scranton, the current ambassador felt compelled to say that he would follow Moynihan's lead — although we haven't heard much of anything from Mr. Scranton during his brief service.

Hopefully, under Young, America will project an attitude of genuine and sympathetic understanding and assistance backed by quiet strength.

No more the shrieking, aggrieved giant.

Doug Bereuter is right.

"I do not think we now provide them with enough information to effectively challenge us," the Utah state senator said last week.

The "we" are members of the Legislature's Appropriations Committee. The "them" are other members of the Unicameral who first confront the state budget on the floor of the Legislature, long after committee members have familiarized themselves with appropriations details.

It is not necessarily the fault of previous budget committees, but the fact is that non-committee members have been badly disadvantaged in helping shape the budget document.

Perhaps not much can be done about that when you consider the massive amount of information contained in the budget bill and the months of decisions which formulated the final recommendations.

But it's worth a try.

I do not envy the Appropriations Committee members their task. What they face, beginning next month, is a grueling, exhausting and often boring four months (or more) of detailed examination of spending by every state agency.

Committee members will need to make hundreds of decisions, and most of them are judgment-calls. Sure, this agency can justify increased expenditures, but the next one may have higher priority needs which require immediate consideration.

It is a long and laborious process, one which needs to be undertaken with a healthy Excedrin supply and an epic amount of patience.

But somehow the crux of the committee's information ought to be submitted to other senators for their consideration. That way if they challenge a decision, they can have an alternative in mind.

The budget process on the floor has often developed into a take-it-or-leave-it proposition. Nine senators, in effect, have made the decisions while 40 others have been called upon to ratify them.

Yes, I know, that's overstatement. But it's more right than wrong.

Budget decisions have been successfully challenged on the floor. But most of those challenges have come in capital construction spending, rather than operational expenditures. And some of them — some of the successful ones — have not been based on the best information.

The Legislature would break down if all 49 senators involved themselves in budgeting for every state agency.

But individual senators have particular interests and expertise in specific fields. With more information, they could contribute to the final funding decision.

That would be a healthy development — one which is possible only if senators are more thoroughly informed on budget decisions (and alternatives) in advance of floor debate.

It's worth a try.

Just a minute, Jimmy

Tom Wicker

New York — It was good to hear President-elect Carter say the other day that he had conducted his presidential campaign so that no one and no group "has any veto power or authority" over his appointments.

That meant he had made no specific commitments to get specific votes, which is reassuring as to the essential independence and integrity of the new President.

But then Carter went a step further and alarm bells went off, or should have. Not only did no one and no group have veto power or authority, he said, but they had "no influence," either, over his cabinet choices and other appointments.

"And so I'm completely at liberty," he said, "absolutely completely at liberty, to make my decisions about the cabinet membership on the basis of merit and who can do the best job in working with me harmoniously to lead our country."

With all due respect to Carter, it was the question whether Richard Nixon was "absolutely completely at liberty" to do as he pleased that led to his downfall.

The notion that a president, having got elected, is "absolutely completely at liberty" is at the heart of the so-called Imperial Presidency — which is not only what many of the American people thought they had rid themselves of in the past election, but what Carter most effectively campaigned against.

This may seem to read too much into an offhand response at a new conference. But the question referred specifically to a "veto" on Carter's appointments, it was his own impulse to go on to reject "influence" too and to declare himself "absolutely completely at liberty." If that represents even an incipient attitude on his part, it ought to be contradicted now.

The fact is that Carter campaigned — as any successful candidate must — in such a way as quite properly to leave with any number of groups and individuals the impression that he intended to govern a certain way, carry out certain programs, give certain needs priorities over others. Those impressions he left are essential commitments to the American people.

Just for one example, Carter did not merely leave an impression, he made a commitment, and repeatedly, to try to cut the defense budget by $5 billion or so. Therefore, while he might wish on other grounds to appoint the able and respected James Schlesinger to be secretary of Defense, to do so would raise questions about that commitment. Schlesinger, whatever his virtues, has long been committed to an increase in the defense budget.

Similarly, some black leaders say Carter told them at a meeting in Charlotte, N.C., last fall that blacks deserved cabinet posts at least proportionate to their share of the total Democratic vote, which is more than 20%.

Whether he did or not, he certainly left the impression throughout his campaign that blacks would be heavily represented in high posts.

At this moment, in the outgoing administration, Treasury Secretary William E. Simon is considering new Internal Revenue Service regulations that would tax as income the ordinary prerequisites of people working for, say, a department store or an airline.

Congress didn't vote for this, nor did any presidential candidate support that proposition. If Simon approves the idea, it will be government by bureaucratic fiat, which Jimmy Carter gave the impression he would not tolerate. But Simon's position that public protests will not influence his decision is not much different from Carter's contention that he is "absolutely completely at liberty" in picking people to fill high offices.

The point is that presidents do not get to be presidents by some divine right, much less may they govern in that fashion.

the small society

by Brickman

Washington — A half century ago, Calvin Coolidge bragged that "the business of America is business." And the Republican Party of that day was proud to represent the captains of industry. Nowadays, though, conservative politicians are much more sensitive to charges of representing business interests.

In fact, quite a few young conservatives — mindful of how little effective business support they receive — are becoming openly critical. It's a phenomenon that deserves attention.

Of course, their criticism comes out of a different bag than Ralph Nader's. The typical complaint is threefold: first, that chicken-hearted business leaders lack the courage of their political convictions; second, that business gives as much or more dollar support to liberals than to free enterprise candidates or spokesmen; and third, that conservative identification with "big business" is a major negative factor in trying to win support in blue-collar, ethnic or farm districts.

These indignations are being voiced by a new breed of populist conservative. They support free enterprise and sound economics not because of subservience to a local manufacturers' associations but from belief that such policies are necessary for the jobs and wellbeing of ordinary Americans. That's a critical distinction.

Any disbelievers should have attended the 1976 meeting of the Conservative Caucus held Dec. 9-10 in Chicago. One item on the agenda: ex-Nixon aide Patrick Buchanan explaining why "Big Business Isn't On Our Side." A second: Paul Weyrich, director of the Committee for the Survival of a Free Congress, describing how big business gave more money to Democratic congressional candidates than to Republicans, then charging that "big business is the biggest prostitute operation in U.S. politics." Or conservative new-party theorist William Rusher reminding the audience of Lenin's comment that business would bid to provide the rope for its own hanging.

Moreover, while these American conservatives are demanding a new ideological militance shorn of big business compromise, one can also see similar signs abroad. In France, former Prime Minister Jacques Chirac has mobilized his right-wing Gaullists as a new third force — the "Rally for the Republic" — and split away from the Establishment middle-of-the-roads led by President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing. The Rally platform? A more populist, lower-middle-class-oriented blend of reduced privileges for the elite, militant anti-Communism and respect for the value of hard work.

Another potential new party captain, Germany's right-wing Franz Joseph Strauss, is also at odds with the more centrist, sedate and business-oriented Christian Democratic Party leadership. Like Gaullist Chirac, Bavaria's Strauss is more militant, more populist, more anti-Communist and decidedly less popular in the salons of the Establishment. Italy, too, has a parallel in Massimo de Carolis, the new, aggressive champion of militant, middle-class anti-Communism in the Italian Chamber of Deputies. Like Strauss and Chirac, De Carolis refuses to accept dominant Establishment moderation or compromise with the left.

Even in Japan, there are signs of a partially similar phenomenon. Although the conservative "Liberal Democratic Party" lost ground in this December's elections, much of the gain went to conservative independents, notably the breakaway "New Liberal Club," a dissatisfied group of young politicians pledged to a "fresh conservatism" that opposes the left while also avoiding the LDP's reliance on big business funds.

There may be an international message here. For years, the business establishment has taken conservatives for granted and lavished its efforts on centrist coalitions and even cultivation of the left. Now it appears that a growing number of militant conservatives refuse to accept these arrangements.

Nix on Nix?

Washington — At age 71, Rep. Robert N.C. Nix, D-Pa., is beginning to run down. The years have slowed his pace; his speech is hesitating. Yet he is a decent old gentleman who, in his plodding way, has tried to do right by his Philadelphia constituents.

Now, after 18 years in the House, he is in line to take over the chairmanship of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee. This would give him an important role in helping President-elect Jimmy Carter reorganize the federal government.

His colleagues in Congress, therefore, are reluctant to oppose Nix. Yet they have come to us sadly with evidence that he isn't qualified for the chairmanship. They say he has a drinking problem, which has reduced his effectiveness.

Nix denied the accusation in a painful interview with our associates, Gary Cohn and Howie Kurtz. The bald, bespectacled, old congressman insisted that he didn't drink any liquor at all. And the suggestion that he is slowing down, he said, was "absurd."

"I've never had any problem with alcohol in my life," he said. "I never frequent any drinking places. I work all day and sleep all night." He denied that he drinks in his office.

"No, no, never," he said. Yet a number of witnesses have given us a different story. They have seen him drunk on many occasions. He starts drinking, they say, in the afternoons, behind the thick oaken door of his office.

For these private snorts, he keeps a bottle of Seagram's Seven Crown in his desk. He often spends the afternoons, say witnesses, sipping whiskey and puffing on cigars.

Callers and constituents may be held off indefinitely with stories of high-level meetings. Sometimes he drops off into an alcoholic sleep. Other times, according to the witnesses, he emerges with liquor on his breath. They report that he showed up drunk once at a committee meeting. On an official visit to Mexico awhile back, they recall, he was frequently intoxicated in public.

Nix denied that he got drunk on the Mexico trip. "I wouldn't drink vodka if I wanted something to drink," he added unaccountably. "I'd drink bourbon."

Footnote: Under the seniority system, Nix is eligible for the Civil Service Committee chairmanship because top-ranking Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., is leaving to take the vacant chairmanship of the Interior Committee. Rep. James Hanley, D-N.Y., next in line behind Nix, hasn't decided whether to challenge him. But many congressmen reluctantly feel that Nix should be pushed aside.

Elves lived in Forest of Ambershine

By Jim Camden
Star Staff Writer

Long ago, in a time when kings ruled their lands from castles high on hilltops and simple people paid as little mind to kings as possible, there was a valley in the far north woods called Ambershine. And in the deepest forest of Ambershine lived the elves.

Elves, you see, are smaller than men, and better with their hands. They can make thread of the finest silver and gold and spin it into cloth. Or they can take the limb of an old dead tree and with the few strokes of a sharp knife turn it into a horse, or a dog, or a deer, or anything else they want.

And elves are magic. Not because they have a pot of gold at the end of a rainbow, like a leprechaun; nor because they grant three wishes like a genie in a magic lamp; nor because they fly around changing toads to princes like fairies.

But elves are magic because they love to work, and because they can do anything they want when they put their minds to it, which is most of the time.

For many, many years, the elves lived side by side with the men in the valley of Ambershine. Men had come to the valley before time was marked on the pages of calendars, but the legends said that when the first men arrived they found the elves in the valley. The men asked if they might stay, and the elves, who did not see how it could hurt, gave the men the glades and the meadows and the clearings. But they asked that the men stay out of the deep woods, for it was there that the elves lived and worked. And the elves valued their privacy.

There came a time in the far north that the men began to increase faster than the elves. And the more men there were, the more thoughtless, unkind, inconsiderate men were around. Some men would even go into the deep woods and steal the things that the elves had made and take them for themselves.

Not that the elves were stingy, for they often gave the things they made to people. But the elves were particular about who they gave gifts to, and why they gave them.

If a boy were without a father, the elves might sneak into his home late at night and leave a fishing pole, or a toy soldier for him to play with.

If a girl were without a mother, the elves might bring her a dress of the finest silk to wear on special occasions or a doll to cradle in her arms.

If a man and woman were without children, the elves might lead a special puppy or kitten to the door one night so the couple could find it the next morning and have something to love.

The poor might find a gold coin; the hungry something to eat; the needy a pair of shoes.

The elves, however, were very secretive, and they were never caught giving their gifts. Few people ever even suspected who was arranging all these wonderful things.

But unfortunately, that meant that most people didn't realize the value of the elves. Some people even wanted the elves out of the valley.

As time passed, more men came, and children were born and the first men who came to the valley died and were forgotten.

Eventually there were more people than there was room in the valley and the people had to make a decision. Either some would have to leave the valley, or they would have to chop down part of the deep forest to make more room.

So the people of the valley held a meeting. All the heads of households from all the families in the valley, and anyone else who wanted to have a say, met at the village inn. The old men smoked their long clay pipes and scratched their beards. The women clicked their knitting needles up and down. And the young men paced the floor.

For a long time, no one had a suggestion. But one very greedy man had his own greedy plan. His name was Gundar.

"We do not have enough room, it's clear," said Gundar when no one else seemed to have an idea. "We need more. And many of the men murmured, 'Aye.'

"There's plenty of room in the valley," Gundar continued. "It could be ours for the taking."

And again some murmured, "Aye." "But the elves," said an old man. "All the land that's left belongs to the elves."

"The elves," sneered Gundar. "What good are the elves to anyone? Do they raise crops?" he asked of no one in particular.

"No," said someone in a puzzled voice.

"And do they run the mills that make flour?" Gundar asked.

"No," said someone else.

"And do they cut the lumber for houses or spin the flax to make cloth?" Gundar asked in a louder voice.

"No!" cried several.

"And do they work the forge to help make steel?" shouted Gundar.

"NO!" came the shout back from many.

"Then I say to you that the elves are nothing to us, and we are nothing to them!" Gundar said. "Who here has talked to an elf, or even seen an elf?"

No one said anything, for no one had ever really seen an elf.

"That's because elves are good for nothing at all, and they know it," Gundar shouted. "And they stay away from men because they don't dare show their faces around decent folk."

"Right!" shouted people in the hall.

"NO!" shouted a voice from the back.

The room fell silent as a young man stepped to the front. It was Nikki, a lad in his teens who swept the inn and slept in the stable. An orphan since he was very young, he had no family of his own.

"Have you talked to an elf, boy?" snarled Gundar.

"Well, I —" Nikki started, "not actually talked."

"Oh, then you've seen one," Gundar badgered.

"Well, no. Not really seen."

"Then what, boy, do you know about elves?"

"I know they exist," Nikki replied.

"And how do you know that?" Gundar demanded.

"Because there must be elves, that's all."

Gundar laughed a wicked laugh.

"There must be elves," he repeated skeptically. "Since the first day men came to this valley they have said 'There must be elves.' But no one bothered to ask, 'Why must there be elves?'"

The people sat thoughtfully looking at Gundar.

"Well now I'm asking it. Why must there be elves?" he said.

The people in the hall looked at each other trying to find an answer.

But Gundar gave them his answer. "There's no good reason for elves. And we don't need them. They're keeping us from the land we need."

The people in the room shouted their agreement.

"Wait!" cried Nikki over the din.

"The elves don't need our approval to live in the woods. Legend says we live here by their approval."

"Legend, Ha!" grumbled Gundar.

"What do we care for legend when we need land?"

"But that's stealing," Nikki said.

"Stealing is when a man takes something from another man," Gundar countered. "We will be taking from elves."

"But the elves need the deep forest," Nikki pleaded.

"Let them find another forest elsewhere," said a woman by the fireplace.

"Let them find their own valley," said an old man through his gray beard.

A chorus of voices joined in: "Away with the elves! Away with the elves!"

Nikki was trying to shout above the voices when a large hand grabbed him from behind, dragged him by the collar and tossed him out the door.

As the door closed, he heard Gundar's voice saying, "Now then, this is how we'll force the elves out of the deep woods."

(Tomorrow: Nikki meets a special friend.)

Eugene, Ore. (UPI) — All Wayne Carroll wanted for Christmas was an electric typewriter. Now he will have at least three.

Carroll, 39, cannot control his arms or legs, and the only recognizable sounds he can make are "Yes" and "No."

But he has learned at the University of Oregon speech and hearing clinic to tap out words on a typewriter with a stick strapped to his head.

Carroll, who was born with quadriplegic cerebral palsy, and his mother, Lena, 67, have only social security income and could not afford to buy a typewriter for their home.

Staff members at the university clinic, where Carroll practices the typewriter three times a week, made a public appeal for help. In less than a week three persons had offered typewriters.

Governor delivers message of peace, goodwill to men

If people attempt to make every day like Christmas, the world will know "peace on earth and goodwill to men," said Gov. J. James Exon in his Christmas message at the carol sing in the State Capitol Rotunda Sunday afternoon.

Exon told the crowd of 200 that similarly, a bicentennial celebration should not be the only time the American people share a sense of unity.

The only way the world would become better is if all the nations practiced the basic principles of "brotherhood of men" every day of the year, Exon said.

Jeanne Pocras samples latke.

Christie Kusher prepares latke batter with her friends.

Todd, Kris, Mike, Mindi and Harold Novicoff gather for candle lighting on the first night of Hanukkah.

Hanukkah holiday includes Santa and traditional Jewish customs

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. And whether Virginia is a Christian or a Jew, during the month of December Santa Claus becomes a part — either directly or indirectly — of every child's life.

Although Jewish children don't observe the Christian religious observance of Christmas, Santa Claus has become a part of the mid-winter holiday observance of some Jewish families.

"I think every little child should believe in Santa Claus," said Mrs. Harold Novicoff, a mother of three. She said her four-year-old daughter is looking forward to Santa's bringing Hanukkah gifts during the eight-day Jewish celebration while he brings Christmas gifts to her Gentile friends.

Mrs. Novicoff said each of her three children has always looked forward to going to see Santa and then awaiting his visit.

She said that more conservative Jewish families frown on the Santa Claus idea for their children but she doesn't feel that way. "I am by no means a reformed Jew, but I feel the idea of Santa Claus is something no child should miss."

And although Santa Claus has not been a part of the winter holiday observance at the Bernard Wishnow home, Wishnow said he and his wife had made a point of teaching their three children tolerance for their friends' belief in Santa Claus.

He noted that when children of all faiths ride in the same cars to school, attend the same schools and participate in many of the same activities, he feels it is important that they be tolerant of each other's beliefs and observances.

Except for the time of year when the holidays fall, Wishnow notes, there is no connection between the Christian observance of Christmas and the Jewish historical holiday of Hanukkah.

But Christmas has had an impact on the gift-giving that traditionally accompanies Hanukkah, which is a jubilant holiday commemorating the rededication of the Temple by Judas Maccabaeus in 165 B.C.

Wishnow said the one-time small gifts of toys, coins, walnuts and other small tokens given to Jewish children during the eight-day celebration has mushroomed into a major gift-giving holiday for many Jewish families.

Noting that it varies considerably between individual families just as Christmas traditions vary among families, Wishnow said for many Hanukkah gift-giving has extended to the grandparents, aunts and uncles, friends and neighbors.

In many instances, it has reached the point that Jewish children make Hanukkah lists and their Hanukkah gifts are compared with the Christmas gifts their Gentile friends receive, he said.

And just as children and teenagers exchange Christmas gifts among their friends, Jewish children also exchange gifts with their Gentile friends.

One Catholic mother said her 11-year-old daughter's best friend is Jewish and her daughter was buying the Jewish friend a Hanukkah gift and the friend in turn was buying the Catholic girl a Christmas gift.

However, the biggest problem confronting these two friends was the time for the gift exchange. The mother said they finally decided upon Dec. 24 — the last day of Hanukkah and Christmas Eve, both being traditional gift-giving times.

The first and final days of Hanukkah are the most celebrated of the eight-day Jewish observance, highlighted by the lighting of the eight candles of the menorah — one additional candle each day of Hanukkah.

Considered a minor holiday among the Jewish people, Hanukkah has no biblical connection but there is some ritual including songs and prayers which accompany the daily candlelighting ceremony.

The jubilant holiday also is celebrated with games using a spinning top or dreidel and traditionally the loser gives up coins or walnuts to game winners.

Dreidels are also used in decorating some Jewish homes during Hanukkah.

Giving of coins was traditional in the family of Mrs. Novicoff who said two large dreidels were always hung up in the home and coins dropped into the dreidels by friends and relatives visiting the home during the eight-day celebration.

On the final day the contents were revealed and given to the children.

As in most holidays, certain foods are traditional with the celebration. For Hanukkah, the potato pancake or latke which is eaten with applesauce is usually served in Jewish homes.

Todd, Mindi and Mike spin traditional dreidels.

Apples: a healthy stocking stuffer

University Park, Pa. (UPI) — Dr. Loren Tukey is urging Santa Claus to use a stocking stuffer he says can clean teeth, battle common colds and relieve hangovers.

Tukey is a professor of pomology (fruit culture) at Penn State University, which helps to account for his belief that an apple in the Christmas stocking can do all three — and also guard against rheumatism.

"It's not a cure-all of course," he said, "but an apple works positively in all those directions."

"Then there's the calorie count. A measly 60 for a big, juicy apple versus 120 or so calories for a very simple Christmas cookie."

Tukey said the malic acid in an apple dissolves lime in human bodies and leaves behind a residue that aids recovery from colds, influenza, virus infections and hangovers.

"And an Apple's efficiency as a tooth and gum cleaner is 95.5%," Tukey said. "That's 30% better than your toothbrush."

Tukey conceded that "Some dentists pooch the apple as a dentifrice, but one who did not was the late Dr. Fred Miller of Altoona, Pa., who came to be known as 'Mr. Apple' for his promotion of apple munching as a tooth aid."

Tukey would also like to see hostesses adopt a European tradition of serving fresh fruit, with a fruit knife alongside, for dessert.

"Coring or peeling an apple at table after dinner relaxes and stimulates conversation," Tukey said.

He says some right-thinking executives have bowls of apples on their conference tables and in reception rooms.

"And Sparrow Hospital in Lansing, Mich., has replaced its cigarette machines with the sale of apples for relieving the tensions of doctors, nurses and visitors."

Tukey says that while an apple goes to the core of the Christmas stocking problem, a gift apple tree can even top that — given two or three years.

Stillwater Y to babysit

Stillwater, Okla. (AP) — Stillwater parents who want to party it up New Year's Eve won't have to worry about their children; they can leave them at the YMCA.

For a $4 fee, parents may take their children between the ages of 5 and 12 to the Y beginning at 7:30 p.m. They don't have to pick them up again until 10 a.m. New Year's Day — by which time Mommy and Daddy should be feeling better.

The children must furnish their own sleeping bag, but the $4 fee includes a New Year's breakfast for the youngsters.

Frosting decoration enlivens Santa cookie.

Cookies made her culinary renown

By Gerry Switzer
Star Staff Writer

"That's how the cookie crumbles" may be merely a nonchalant saying to some, but for Trudy Richardson it has had a significant impact.

For it was Trudy's cookies which have gained for her a love of cooking, a means for teaching her children that giving of oneself as a gift of love, many friends throughout the country, numerous job offers and innumerable blue and purple ribbons.

And those prize-winning recipes are now featured as part of "Cookie Crumbs" by Trudy Richardson in a cookie kit which is selling in gourmet sections of major department and specialty stores across the country.

The kit, which is put out by a New Jersey-based gourmet specialties firm, contains a number of items needed for making cookies which are packaged in a large canning-type jar with "COOKIES" in bold lettering across the front.

The prize-winning recipes grew out of tear shedding over cooking failures, trial and error and the urging of friends to "take something to the fair."

The 30-year-old Omahan, who is now a cooking consultant and instructor for Brandeis, recalls she learned by doing, with the help of neighbors and friends in rural Illinois where she lived with her husband, who was stationed in the military at Champaign, Ill.

When it came fair time, she said she was told "everybody has to take something to the fair."

"I'd never been to a fair, let alone considered taking something to enter," she said.

But on their insistence, she said she mixed up a couple of things and went home with a couple of ribbons.

From those first entries, creations by the vivacious mother of four became regular entries in county and state fairs; and many of those creations, most of which were cookies, were also regular winners of blue and purple ribbons.

And like magic, cookies have changed the lives of the Richardson family.

In fact, her most prize-winning recipe — the winner of 50 blue ribbons — is "Magic Cookies," named by one of her daughters, who when she was very small, insisted that those cookies were "magic" cookies because they could be "anything I want them to be."

Mrs. Richardson recalls how cookies and other baked items made Christmas for them and those with whom they shared them as gifts when there was little money to spend.

She said her husband, who is an Omaha police officer, had an accident which necessitated back surgery and the loss of income for several months.

When Christmastime came, she said, she went out and for less than $50 bought ingredients for Christmas and Hanukah gifts which were greatly appreciated by the recipients and at the same time gained her many friends and contacts.

After her gift cookies began circulating, Mrs. Richardson said she received numerous calls asking her to make cookies for individuals and groups, requests for instruction in making the fancy cookies and requests for the recipes themselves.

The circle of friendships grew wider, while at the same time her children began to realize how giving of oneself in the form of something the individual creates and shares is truly a gift of love, she said.

Cooking classes grew in the small Richardson kitchen which later was enlarged through income Mrs. Richardson has earned with cookie making and teaching cookie artistry and giving other demonstrations.

She said it got to the point that when she made cookies, breads and other goodies, her family would ask, "Are these for us or for a class?"

Starting out as a biology major with aspirations of going into genetics, Mrs. Richardson says she is not a home economist, has learned only by her failures, and adds that her first loaf of bread could have served as a doorstep.

Although her cookies display the appearance of very detailed artistry, she insists she isn't an artist and couldn't begin to draw on paper what she puts on cutout cookies.

She said the cookie artistry is really only an illusion created through the combining of lines, dots and other dabs of frosting.

Stressing versatility in cookie recipes as well as in all cooking and cooking equipment, Mrs. Richardson encourages the use of a basic recipe which can be altered by merely changing flavorings and ingredients.

"The range of cookies is almost limitless and your cookies can carry out the theme of a party or special occasion or just give your little ones a good time choosing which cutter they will use," she said.

"Add a little of yourself to the recipes — feel free to change flavorings, add finely chopped nuts or zest from citrus, etc.," she states in the "Cookie Crumbs" booklet of her recipes.

She said she frequently divided a batch of cookies into thirds and varies the flavoring or ingredients in each third which makes for even more variety when using her master rolling method. This method eliminates tough cookies which may result from rerolling scraps of dough.

Given above is her master rolling method as well as the recipe for "Magic Cookies."

Variations enhance cookies

Magic Cookies

1 1/4 c. butter or margarine
2 1/4 c. sugar
2 Tbsp. corn syrup
3 eggs
5 c. flour
1 tsp. salt
4 tsp. baking powder
1 1/2 tsp. vanilla or 1/2 tsp. freshly-grated nutmeg
1/2 c. light cream (in a pinch use milk, but cream makes a richer cookie)

1. Cream butter and sugar.
2. Add eggs one at a time and beat until fluffy.
3. Stir together dry ingredients and add alternately with light cream. If the dough is sticky, add a little more flour.
4. Roll out as directed in the Master Rolling Method. Cut with cutters.
5. Bake in 375-degree oven until edges are golden and bottoms are delicately browned (6-8 min.)
6. Cool on brown paper.

(For variations add one or more of the following: 1/4 c. finely chopped nuts; fresh or packaged orange or lemon peel. 3-4 Tbsp. chocolate or cocoa.)

Master Rolling Method

1. Add enough flour to make a soft but not sticky dough. In some recipes leave out 1/4 to 1/2 cup flour.

2. Use a pastry cloth (a pillowcase folded in half is super) that is generously dusted with flour. You may wish to use a rolling pin cover to keep the wooden pin dusted with flour.

3. The first handful of dough will be softer than the remaining dough, so coat all sides of that handful with flour and form a flattened ball. With quick, light strokes, roll it out as you would for a pie crust.

Tiny snowmen decorate cookie.

4. Cut with favorite cutters and place on cookie sheet.

5. Take trimmings from the first rolling and add a handful of new dough and quickly and lightly work them together in your hands to form a flattened ball as before. Proceed to roll and cut. (While rolling and cutting the first batch, the flour has been absorbing more of the liquid used in the dough. The flour from the cloth on the trimmings will also absorb more flour and the remaining dough will be very easy to work with.)

Domestic wines may soon have more detailed labels

Associated Press
The federal government is trying to make it easier for buyers of U.S.-produced wine to identify what's on the label with what's in the bottle.
The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms of the Department of the Treasury has proposed a series of changes in the regulations governing the labeling of domestic wine. It also has suggested the creation of a brand new category of top-quality wine which would be allowed to carry a special seal.
Americans have been steadily increasing the amount of wine they drink, although per-capita consumption remains far below European countries. Under the new rules, consumers would be able to tell more about the vintage or year of a wine, the place it comes from and the type of grapes used to manufacture it.

The bureau is holding hearings on its regulations in San Francisco and Washington. It also is accepting written comments, addressed to the Director, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, Washington, D.C., 20226, through next March 12.
The California Wine Institute said California shipped 272.5 million gallons of wine to market in 1975. That represents more than 80% of the wine made in the United States, but it is less than one-fifth the amount of wine produced in France.
The institute said it could not provide any breakdown of how much of the wine produced in California was red and how much was white. Asked how much would qualify for the top-quality seal proposed by the government, a spokesman said:

"God only knows."
Reading wine labels — no matter what the regulations — can get confusing. Here are a few key terms to look for:
—Appellation of origin: This refers to the place where the wine was made. Under the proposed rules, a domestic wine which carries a label including the words "appellation of origin" could indicate that the wine is from the United States, a particular state or a specific county. The phrase is similar on French wines: appellation d'origine controlee. As a general guide, the more specific the place name, the better the wine. A wine labeled as being from a particular vineyard, for example, should be better than one from a particular district. A district wine should be better than one from a particular region.

Virtually all of the better French wines will carry an "appellation controlee" label. The one exception is champagne which is covered by another set of French laws prohibiting anyone from calling a sparkling wine champagne unless it is actually made in the Champagne district. Most other countries abide by this restriction, but the United States does not. Hence, the somewhat contradictory New York and California "champagne."
—Varietal wine: This is a wine named after a grape. It must derive at least 51% of its volume from a specific type of grape grown in the area indicated on the label. Under present rules, only 26% of the grapes have to be grown in the area specified, although 51% have to be of the variety described. An example of a varietal wine might be "pinot noir" — made from a type of dark purple grape.

—Vintage: This tells you what year a wine was made. If it is labeled with a vintage, the government regulations require that at least 95% of the grapes used in making the wine come from the year on the label.
—Viticulural area: A wine-growing region identified by a particular geographic feature such as a mountain, stream or valley. The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms will set boundaries for designated viticultural areas and will list the areas in the final regulations.
—Estate bottled: Only the top-quality, "ATF Seal" domestic wine will be able to carry this phrase.

Widow values insurance now

DEAR ABBY: I am 27 years old, with two young children, and widowed only this month. For those women who haven't experienced this, it is terrifying. But there is one thing I'm not worried about, and that's how I am going to feed my family of three for the next 16 years. I can't take the credit.
Last year, a life insurance salesman sold my husband a $50,000 life insurance policy — over my objection. I just couldn't see our spending $14 a month. I wish now that he'd sold us twice as much.
We don't get a lot, but it will get us by.
A word to future widows: Listen to life insurance salesmen. You'll be glad you did when you get that check.
KNOWS BETTER NOW
DEAR KNOWS: Life insurance salesmen are

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

frequently accused of being too pushy, too persistent and too high pressure. But as a matter of policy they provide heaven-sent protection against personal tragedy.
DEAR ABBY: In reading the letter from the father who found pornographic pictures in his 14-year-old son's wallet, I have nothing but sympathy for him.

I wish more parents could understand the sexual tensions teenagers suffer today. It varies from person to person, of course. But a lot has changed since parents were in their teens.
Being 17, I've found little pornography available and little demand for it from my age group. But I still believe in our constitutional right to read anything we like. It has been said that a country that burns books eventually will burn people.
PHILLIP R.
DEAR PHILLIP: You have a good head on those 17-year-old shoulders.
DEAR ABBY: My wife insists on letting our dog lick our plates clean after we've eaten. She also treats him to the pots and pans she's cooked in, saying he enjoys this more than his own bowl.
I tell her it's unsanitary, but she says everything is sterilized when it goes into the dishwasher, so there is nothing unsanitary about it. What do you think?

SICK IN SAN CLEMENTE
DEAR SICK: I'm with you. Sterilized or not, psychologically, it's sickening!

Jean Besse of Switzerland, one of Europe's top players, tells this delightful story. It seems there was a pair championship going on in Paris. East-West were a couple of up-and-coming young players who were fighting hard to make their mark in the tournament.

They had played so slowly during the preceding round, that, when they came to the next table to play against a new North-South pair, there wasn't even time to discuss what systems they were each playing.
(In tournaments, the players must tell their opponents the conventions they use, such as weak notrumps, Stayman, weak jump-overcalls, grand slam force, etc.)

The following bidding there-upon took place on the hand shown in the diagram:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♥	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	5 ♥	Pass
5 ♠	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Dble

North led the ace of diamonds, South signaling for a continuation with the nine. North stewed a while, but next played the ace of clubs. Again South signaled with the nine. North then had to decide whether to lead a diamond or a club. He finally led a diamond, won by South with the queen. It was now South's turn to cogitate. Although West was already down 500, South gave the matter very serious thought. North had led the seven of diamonds at trick three, obviously his highest one, thus marking declarer with at least one more diamond.

But South was nevertheless in doubt. He had a strong feeling that he should lead the club king first. Still uncertain, South finally turned to East and said: "Please. What system are you two playing?"
North, "his partner, immediately interrupted and said: "Why do you ask such a question? Don't tell me that you want to learn this system!"
West went down four — 1,100.

Statue back on its pedestal

Florence, Italy (UPI) — Art lovers who missed seeing the ancient Greek statue, the Medici Venus, in Washington can now see it in its permanent home, Florence's Uffizi Gallery.
The famous statue had been on display at Washington's National Gallery since last April as part of Italy's contribution to the U.S. bicentennial celebration.

It was returned to Italy by ship and now sits on its pedestal in the Uffizi's main gallery.

By Louis Harris

A 78-10% majority of Americans want Vice-President-elect Walter Mondale to have "more responsibility for running the government" than former vice presidents have had.

However, only a thin 43-37% plurality thinks Mondale will play such a role during the Carter presidency.

There is a good deal of optimism among the public about Mondale; a 52-28% majority believes he will do a good to excellent job.

The national cross section of 1,330 adults interviewed in this latest Harris Survey would like to see Mondale assume responsibility in the following areas:

—The administration's relations with Congress (68-13%). The public feels that with his background as a two-term U.S. senator, Mondale is particularly qualified to assume greater responsibility in congressional relations. While the vice president is always technically the presiding officer of the Senate, few former veeps have played a pivotal role in working out agreements with Congress.

—Problems of the cities (64-17%). One reason behind this feeling is that Mondale has been widely associated with the northern and urban wing of the Democratic Party and probably had his greatest impact in the recent election in the big cities.

—Problems connected with the energy shortage (62-18%).

—Problems related to labor and jobs (61-18%). During the recent election no issue was more closely associated with Mondale than that of jobs and unemployment.

—Problems connected with agriculture (60-16%). A native of Minnesota, an agricultural state, Mondale is identified with the problems of the farmers.

—Problems connected with children and the family (58-18%). The senator has taken the lead during his service in the U.S. Senate in investigating problems of children, and is viewed as an authority on this subject.

—Problems related to the arts and culture (57-18%). During the recent campaign, his wife, Joan, spoke in favor of the arts, and it became clear that the Mondales are interested in cultural and artistic causes.

In two areas, less than a majority opted for the new vice president taking on much more responsibility:

—A 48-29% plurality would like to see Mondale more deeply involved in problems related to foreign policy.

—A 48-30% plurality would like him more directly involved in problems related to military affairs.

Obviously, the public emphasizes Mondale's role in domestic rather than foreign affairs — traditionally a responsibility of the President.

Recently, the Harris Survey asked the cross section:

"There has been much talk about the vice president sharing much more of the responsibility for running the federal government than has been the case in the past. Do you agree or disagree that the vice president should have more responsibility for running the government?"

The Harris Survey then asked:

"Of course, there always seems to be much talk after an election that the vice president should take on more duties, but then it doesn't really happen. Do you think Vice-President-elect Mondale will really be given a lot more responsibility by President-elect Carter, or do you think it will end up the way it always has in the past?"

London — It's raining in London. But not enough to dampen the hordes of French, Germans and Belgians who are buying everything in sight. The pound is down — the bargains are out of sight.

The Evening Standard deplores the rush of foreign buyers. But it quotes: "A 24-piece dinner service that sells for $70 in Germany, $55 in Paris, is only $30 at Selfridge's in the West End."

(Prices were given in pounds; I put them into dollars.)

Stores say four of every 10 buyers are foreigners. Ferries arrive every 40 minutes from the Continent. Some people stop only at the ports, buy a refrigerator, wrestle it onto the deck and sail back to France.

In the midst of all this madness, the British shopkeeper remains calm and unchanged.

It's the Christmas season but the only store that stays open all day Saturday is famous Harrod's in Knightsbridge. All other department stores close at noon as usual.

Outside, bewildered foreigners hammer on the darkened doorways.

"Ten thousand French cars crossed the Channel to England on the long Armistice Day weekend," says a Paris paper.

Says the Evening Standard: "The Channel that stopped Hitler and Napoleon has become no better than a six-inch moat."

To dinner the other night at the Hotel Savoy which some people think serves the best food in England.

Not that England is noted for gourmet restaurants. Egon Ronay, a writer of guides to British hotels and restaurants, took five English chefs to Paris recently.

He intended to prove that England can cook as well as la belle France. He set up his five chefs at Maxim's, three-starred and elegant.

The French critics were kind to them: "Interesting," was the best compliment. Which isn't much.

The Savoy is built on the site of a palace. Henry III gave the Thames-side real estate to Peter of Savoy. He built on it "the fayrest manoir in Europe."

For this choice piece of land, Peter paid Henry "three barbed arrows to be yielded yearly at the Exchequer." (You think that's odd — the Lord of East Charlton still pays the Queen 100 hennings. Must smell up the palace considerably. But that's the custom and everybody must abide by it.)

The palace fell into ruinous condition when Peter moved out. The hotel was built in 1899. It was the amazement of London. It had hydraulic lifts — elevators, that is. And it had 70 bathrooms!

While they were building it, Whistler did a canvas called "Savoy Scaffolding." He was the man who did the famous picture of his mama.

Lily Langtry got a room for $150 a year. For $60-a-year more they threw in a maid and hairdresser service. (Room rates have risen since then, Lily.)

In the year 1890 Sarah Bernhardt took too many sleeping pills. She was revived in time to play next night's performance of Joan of Arc.

The Prince of Wales wheeled in the Duc d'Orleans for dinner. He had fractured a knee.

The chef was M. Joseph. He was lured away by William K. Vanderbilt and his American gold. Mr. Vanderbilt, on arrival in America, ordered corned beef and cabbage.

"Monsieur should order dinner from the gardener," sneered Chef Joseph. He stalked back to the Savoy without ever warming a frying pan.

Monday wrapup: Raiders, Powers, coaching contracts

Note to all wives: The football "weekend" isn't over yet. Alabama and UCLA go at it tonight in the Liberty Bowl to make it six games on the tube in three days.

You can make it seven by throwing in an hour of Nebraska highlights on Tom Osborne's show last night.

How are the eyes holding out? Instant replay treated us all to another "cheap shot" by Oakland safety George Atkinson, this time on New England tight end Russ Francis.

I don't often agree with "Dandy Don" Meredith, but you can't argue with his statement that if Atkinson can't handle his defensive responsibilities within the rules of the game, Oakland ought to get somebody in there who can.

I'd admit to being a Raider booster because of Monte Johnson, Dave Humm, and Rik Bonness. But there is no place in football for the kind of tactics the cameras caught Atkinson using on Lynn Swann of Pittsburgh in the first game this fall and against Francis Saturday.

It'll be interesting to see what happens next week as he tries to cover Swann again in another Raider-Steelers matchup.

Speaking of Oakland defensive backs, ex-Raider Warren Powers — who wasn't cut out of the same mold as Atkinson — says he hasn't yet "made any concrete agreement with anybody to become an assistant for me" as he prepares to take over the head coaching reins at Washington State.

"I have expressed interest in some people," Powers says, avoiding the issue of whether any of them are current Cornhusker aides. "The list includes three who were on the Washington State staff last year."

Look for Powers to finalize his WSU staff this week. That brings us to Monte Kiffin, another Nebraska aide who aspires to be a head coach some day.

Monte has been the target of some unfair assumptions by many Big Red fans. They point to his application for the Oregon job as dissatisfaction with his role as the defensive coordinator at Nebraska.

There's a great deal of difference between being unhappy in your current job and wanting to rise to the top in your chosen profession. Everyone should have the ambition to do the latter. If Kiffin didn't, he wouldn't be the highly emotional, competitive guy he is.

Just because he desires to be a head coach doesn't mean he won't continue to give 110 percent for Tom Osborne and the Huskers until that opportunity comes along.

When you look at the college bowl lineups for the next couple of weeks, it's amazing to realize that Missouri has put away its uniforms for the year.

Mizzou won just six games — but five of them were against bowl teams — including three clubs which are going to play in the 'Big Daddy' bowls, USC of the Rose Bowl and both teams in the Orange — Ohio State and Colorado.

In addition, Mizzou knocked off North Carolina (Peach) and Nebraska (Astro-Bluebonnet).

Despite the disappointment, Tiger coach Al Onofrio wasn't fired. He got a new contract.

Los Angeles avenges loss

Dallas (AP) — Los Angeles redeemed itself for a humiliating loss a year ago and charged into the National Football Conference title game Sunday with a 14-12 victory over the Dallas Cowboys on Lawrence McCutcheon's controversial fourth-quarter touchdown run.

McCutcheon hurried himself into the Cowboy line on third down and was hit by linebackers Thomas Henderson and Lee Roy Jordan on the vital play.

There wasn't an immediate touchdown signal but referee Fred Silva tossed up his hands after he unspooled the mass of players at the goal line.

"There's no doubt in my mind that I made it—I thought I was in—the ref must have thought I was over, too, and that's what counts," said McCutcheon.

He added: "I got in on the first thrust and it's just natural for them to complain and say I didn't make it."

Henderson, so emotionally choked up that he could barely speak, said, "We stopped him at least six inches short. I was right in front of him and I wasn't even in the end zone."

"He wasn't in there... He wasn't in the end zone, period! I hit him square up... He did not go anywhere but straight up."

Jordan, playing his last game in a 14-year career, said: "There's no way he made it over. He was closer to the goal the first time than the second time."

Even unflappable Dallas Coach Tom Landry exhibited a little steam when asked about the play.

"I don't see how he got it over—it seems like we had him stopped dead," said Landry.

Los Angeles Coach Chuck Knox said: "We finally proved it to the 'doubting Thomases' we could win a big game. Dallas had our number, but this win turned that around."

"Revenge? No, revenge isn't in my vocabulary," he added. "I don't believe in revenge wins. The victory was a team effort."

It was a roughing-the-kicker penalty that preceded McCutcheon's run—and it was McCutcheon's run that sends the Rams to Minnesota for next Sunday's NFC title match against the Vikings.

Los Angeles apparently had just tied the game 10-10 on Tom Dempsey's 24-yard field goal but safety Cliff Harris barged into the Rams' kicker and the officials marked off five yards and a first down at the Dallas three-yard line.

The Cowboys held for two plays before McCutcheon squirmed his way under a pile of players 49 seconds into the fourth quarter.

The Rams' defense was superb in the second half. After trailing 10-7 at intermission, Isiah Robertson, Dave Elmendorf and Monte Jackson thwarted Cowboy drives by intercepting quarterback Roger Staubach.

With 3:03 to go and the Cowboys facing a fourth-and-two at the Los Angeles 32, Robertson knocked down a pass intended for Preston Pearson to beat back a Dallas comeback drive and give the Rams the ball.

Three plays later, they had to kick—and Charlie Waters blocked his second punt of the day, giving the Cowboys the ball on the Rams' 17 with 1:52 to play.

Three passes sailed incomplete. On fourth down, Staubach hit tight end Billy Joe DuPree, who fell in a tangle of Rams players half a foot short of the vital first down. The Rams, once again in possession, all but ran out the clock, then punter Rusty Jackson ran out of the end zone to give Dallas its final two points on a safety on the final play of the game.

It was a costly fumble by Drew Pearson which defensive end Fred Dryer recovered at the Dallas 30 that set the winning touchdown drive in motion.

The victory was sweet revenge for a 37-7 trouncing suffered by the Rams at the hands of the Cowboys in the NFC title game last year in Los Angeles.

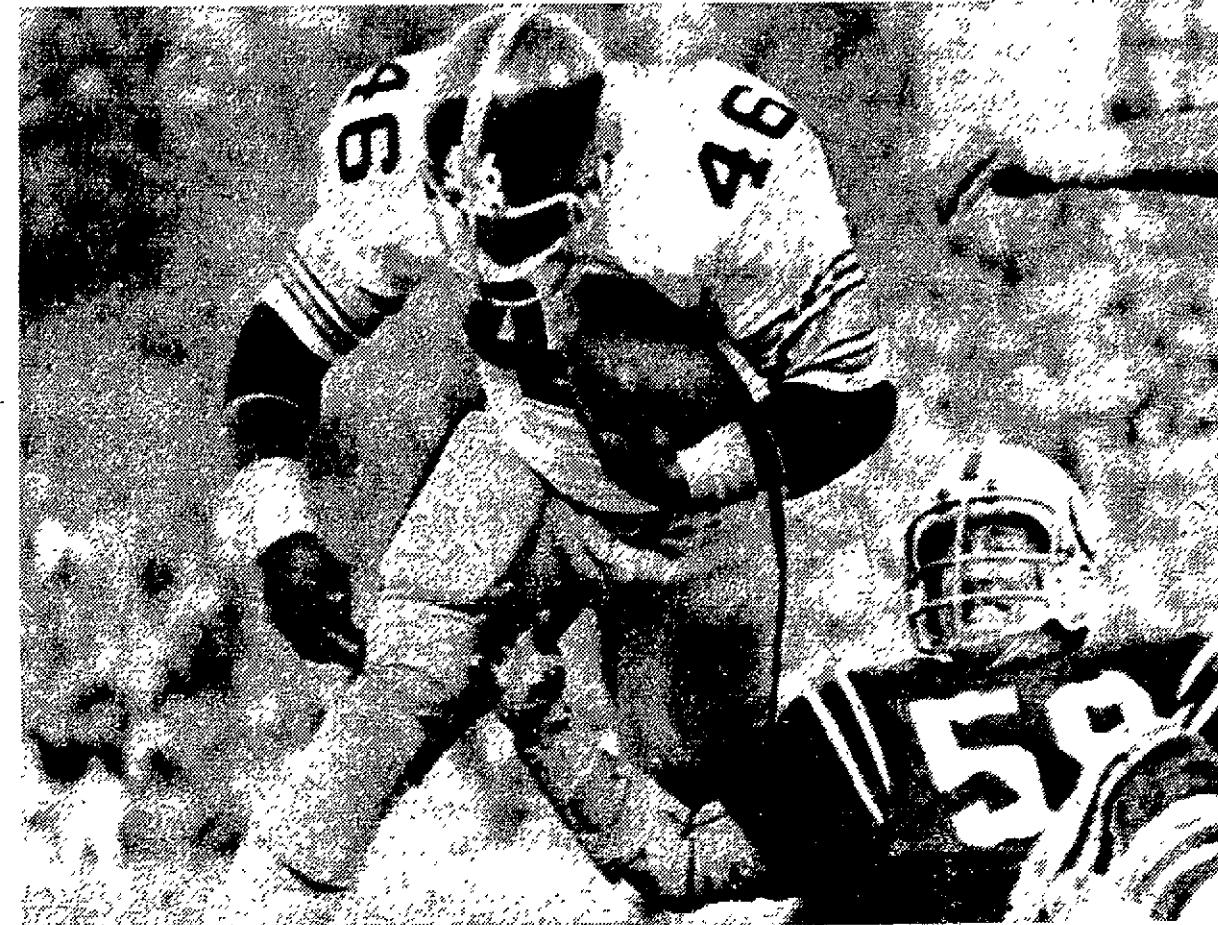

Efren Herrera's 44-yard field goal gave the NFC East champion Cowboys a 3-0 lead in the first period.

But the Rams countered in the second quarter behind rookie quarterback Pat Haden, who completed passes of 11 and 42 yards to Harold Jackson before rolling around left end for a go-ahead touchdown to make it 7-3.

Waters blocked Jackson's punt to put Dallas in position for a 47-yard scoring drive late in the second period. Scott Laidlaw bulled across from one yard out with 46 seconds left in the half to give Dallas a 10-7 lead.

The Cowboys, three-point favorites, blew an excellent scoring opportunity early in the game when rookie Butch Johnson dashed 44 yards with a punt to the Rams' 28-yard line. However, defensive end Jack Youngblood sacked Staubach and offensive tackle Ralph Neely was flagged for holding to put Dallas out of field goal range.

There's no place like home in basketball.

"They've only played one of seven games at home so far, and I'm sure they can't wait to play at home. For us, it's always tougher to play on the road," noted Nebraska basketball coach Joe Cipriano, who sends his Huskers against Northwestern University at 8:05 p.m. Monday at McGraw Hall at Evanston, Ill.

Home is where the Huskers occasionally don't play so well. Nebraska has performed well on the road, however, winning three of five games, including an overtime match at the University of Washington.

The Wildcats have won only two of seven games, beating Brown and Ohio University while losing to Fairfield, DePaul, Notre Dame (105-78), Arizona and Arizona State.

It appears that coach Tex Winter's crew will be the weakest of the four Big Ten teams Nebraska meets this season. NU has already lost to Iowa (71-57), nationally-rated Minnesota (66-58) and Illinois (67-63). But don't try telling that to Cipriano.

"They've got more experience this year. The players are more familiar with this system (Winter, in his fourth year). That has to help them. I'm sure they'll be tougher than last year, (when NU beat Northwestern, 79-68 in Lincoln)," Cipriano said.

Cipriano is quite knowledgeable about Winter. The Wildcat coach guided Kansas State from 1953 through 1968, winning 262 and losing 117 while earning two Big Seven titles and six Big Eight crowns.

"He hasn't changed his philosophy at all," Cipriano said of Winter. "He's always had a lot of big people with potential. This year, they should be ready to play."

It may be, a little guard who will give Nebraska the most problems.

Billy McKinney, a 6-0 senior, is the school's all-time career scoring leader with 1,384 entering this season. A year ago, he was the team scoring leader with 533 points and averaged 19.8 points-per-game.

McKinney, who is averaging 21.7 points this season, took Wildcat scoring honors with 22 points in last year's game against Nebraska.

"Billy McKinney is very much like Jerry Fort (graduated NU scoring leader) so we'll have to stop him. Northwestern has played some very good teams on the road and has performed well," Cipriano explained.

"This would've been a good year to stay away from Big Ten teams," he noted. "But I still can't say if meeting the four Big Ten teams will be good for our team. We'll have to wait until January (when Big Eight Conference action begins)."

The Huskers return home Wednesday, meeting Mankato State in a 7:35 p.m. game at the NU Sports Center.

The Nebraska Rebounders club will meet at noon Wednesday at the Nebraska Center. Featured guests include Cipriano and Mankato State coach Lloyd Raymond.

The public is invited. Monday's featured Big Eight game sends Kansas State, winners of six of seven, to the University of Arkansas. Coach Eddie Sutton's Razorbacks rallied to defeat Kansas, 67-63, Saturday night at Lawrence.

Ramirez prevents U.S. sweep

Tucson, Ariz. (AP) — Raul Ramirez of Mexico prevented a U.S. sweep of their Davis Cup challenge match Sunday as the teams split a pair of singles contests. The Americans won the competition 4-1.

Ramirez defeated Arthur Ashe 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 to prevent a U.S. sweep of the three-day match.

Earlier in the day, Roscoe Tanner beat Roberto Chavez 6-1, 6-3, 2-6, 6-3 to give the U.S. squad a 4-0 advantage.

The United States, captained by Tony Trabert, actually clinched the American zone match Saturday when its doubles team of Stan Smith and Bob Lutz won over Ramirez and Emilio Montano 6-2, 6-3, 6-4.

The triumph for the U.S. team ended two years of frustration against Mexico. Ramirez had engineered Mexican upsets of the Americans two years in a row.

Sunday's matches were delayed three hours by rain.

While some coaches lose their job for less-than-spectacular success, LSU's Charley McClendon has to be in a class by himself.

After disappointing years with 5-5-1, 4-7 and 6-4-1 records, the LSU Board of Supervisors voted to lop three years off his five-year contract. In effect, he was told he was 60 percent fired.

Tony Davis returned to the Nebraska campus this week after Cincinnati was eliminated from the playoffs by the surging Pittsburgh Steelers.

The ex-Husker fullback, who thrilled Big Red fans with his hard-nosed running, says the practice sessions in the pros are a snap. The tough part is the long, demanding team meetings.

Skull sessions last four hours every morning, Davis says. Offensive players are required to not only master a complicated system, but must thoroughly understand the opposing team's defensive schemes.

Davis, as everyone who knows him would suspect, wasn't in awe of the bigger, more mobile defensive players he had to move out as the lead blocker in short yardage situations.

"Tough Tony" did a solid job and likely has a long pro career in front of him.

Steelers rip Colts, 40-14

Baltimore (AP) — Pittsburgh's vaunted defense held firm as usual and the Steelers romped over the Baltimore Colts 40-14 in a National Football League playoff game Sunday with big-play help from the offense and special teams.

Baltimore's offense, rated No. 1 in the NFL, managed only 170 net yards against the league's top defensive unit. But it was the Pittsburgh offense which caused the biggest surprise as the Steelers won their 10th consecutive game in a march toward an unprecedented third straight Super Bowl championship.

They face the Raiders in Oakland next Sunday with the American Conference title at stake. The Steelers have won it the last two seasons by beating the Raiders.

A 76-yard bomb to Frank Lewis, the first of three touchdown passes by Terry Bradshaw, came on the third play of the game and set the tone for the Pittsburgh big-play assault against Baltimore.

"We felt that was necessary to shut off the Colts," Steelers Coach Chuck Noll said. "They're a big-play team and we felt we would turn it around on them—take their away and get it ourselves."

Before the half ended, with the Steelers ahead 26-7, Theo Bell also contributed a 60-yard kickoff return and Franco Harris gained 50 of his 132 rushing yards on a second-quarter jaunt. Harris suffered injured ribs and left the game early in the third period.

"This is a good as we've played offensively," Noll said of the Steelers' 526 net yards. "Our passing game up until today was a kind of 'what passing game?' situation. The line did a superb job in pass protection. Terry couldn't have asked for anything more."

Coach Ted Marchibroda of the Colts said, "I think maybe today we found out we're not a Super Bowl team. But I told the players to hold their heads high — not too many teams can go 11-3."

Rocky Bleier, Pittsburgh's other 1,000-yard rusher in 1976, also left the game with an injured foot in the first period. But substitute Reggie Harrison scored two touchdowns on runs on one and 10 yards and Roy Gerela booted field goals of 45 and 25 yards.

Bradshaw, who returned to action last week after missing five games with a wrist injury, also tossed touchdown passes of 29 and 11 yards to Lynn Swann. Bradshaw completed 14 of 18 pass attempts for 264 yards.

Seldom rushed by Baltimore's vaunted Sack Pack, which had recorded 57 quarterback sacks during the regular season, Bradshaw had little trouble picking apart the Colts' suspect secondary. Bradshaw was sacked just once, moments before halftime — but the Steelers recovered and Gerela kicked his second field goal with four seconds to go in the half.

Rookie Mike Kruczek, who directed six Pittsburgh victories while Bradshaw recovered from his regular-season injuries, took over at quarterback midway in the final period. He completed five of six attempts for 44 yards.

Baltimore's Bert Jones, meanwhile, was under constant pressure. He was sacked five times, intercepted twice and completed only 11 of 25 passes for 99 net yards.

The Steelers, who had allowed only 28 points during their nine-game streak, gave up their first opening-quarter touchdown of the season on a 17-yard pass from Jones to Roger Carr. A one-yard scoring run by Roosevelt Leaks in the fourth quarter was the first allowed on the ground by Pittsburgh in 10 games.

Pittsburgh, winners of the AFC Central Division for the third consecutive season, beat Baltimore's East Division champs for the second straight year. In the first round of the 1975 playoffs Pittsburgh prevailed 28-10 after trailing 10-7 in the third period. That victory ended a Baltimore nine-game winning streak.

The field goals by Gerela followed interceptions of Jones passes by safeties Mike Wagner and Glen Edwards in the first half. Bell's 60-yard kickoff return, after Baltimore had closed to within 9-7, set up Harrison's first TD run.

The Colts recovered a Harrison fumble on the Baltimore two-yard line following the 50-yard jaunt by Harris, but the Steelers came right back after forcing Baltimore to punt. Bradshaw connected with Swann on the 29-yarder 53 seconds before halftime.

Lydell Mitchell, Baltimore's 1,000-yard runner, was held to 55 yards in 16 attempts. Carr, the yardage leader among receivers during the season with 1,112, caught just two passes for 35 yards against the Steelers. His TD reception came on a diving grab in the right corner of the end zone.

A look at Big Eight cage tourney favors Missouri

A quick Monday look at Nebraska basketball, thoroughbred horse racing and other items:

Coach Joe Cipriano's Huskers have their best chance at beating a Big Ten team tonight when they visit Evanston, Ill., to face Northwestern, the only private school in the Big Ten.

The Big Ten is having one of its most balanced seasons in years and the Huskers picked the wrong year to play them. Nebraska has lost to Iowa, Minnesota and Illinois.

The Huskers had good luck and bad luck in the pairings at next week's Big Eight Preseason Basketball Tournament at Kemper Arena in Kansas City, Mo. NU was fortunate in drawing Colorado for the Tuesday night opener.

Assuming NU stops Colorado, the Huskers probably will face Missouri in Wednesday's semifinal match. Missouri, last year's Big Eight champion, meets Iowa State in its first-round contest.

The surprise team thus far in the nonconference season has been coach Dave Bliss' Oklahoma Sooners, undefeated in six contests.

The Sooners compete Tuesday and Wednesday in the Rebel Classic at Las Vegas. Assuming OU defeats Murray State (the Ohio Valley member went 9-17 last season) and the host Rebels defeat Bradley, it would produce a Wednesday-night meeting between highly-touted Las Vegas and Oklahoma.

The Big Eight has been most pleased with the early success of its schools against nonconference opposition.

The league has a 39-19 mark. The top four teams Oklahoma (6-0); Kansas State (6-1) and Kansas and Missouri (each 6-2) sport a 24-5 record.

No team is below .500. Lincolntonites with cable television can watch the University of Minnesota battle Marquette University, one of the country's top basketball teams on Tuesday at 8 p.m. on channel eight. The Gophers, who defeated Nebraska, 66-58, two weeks ago in the NU Sports Center, feature all-American candidate Mike Thompson.

The MG early-line on the Big Eight Tournament race with comments as an added bonus:

Missouri (2-1) — appears to be an improving sort; Kansas State (3-1) — Frosh Redding gives added dimension, smug ride needed; Kansas (7-2) — will have to turn height advantage into points; Nebraska (3-2) — faces uphill struggle against Missouri, darkhorse; Oklahoma (5-1) — have to defeat better foes than early opponents; Oklahoma State (6-1) — Ronnie Daniel needs more help; Colorado (10-1) — asking a bit too much; Iowa State (15-1) — made great strides from last year, but in a little deep here.

Switching to ponies: Former Park has recorded another first this year — its separate stakes book:

The top races at this year's 40-day meet include the $15,000-added Nebraska Derby, a mile chase for 3-year-olds on April 23; and the $15,000-added Gus Fonner Handicap, a mile and 70-yard event for 3-year-olds & up, on April 30.

General manager Al Swihart figures total purses will be a record $930,000 with stakes and features estimated to offer $150,000.

The meet opens March 3 and runs through April 30. The first three weeks feature Thursday-Friday and Saturday racing. The minimum purse will be a record $2,000.

Swihart said the new addition to the clubhouse will add 105 tables and 420 chairs. It should be ready before the opener, Swihart said.

New 1977 Nebraska thoroughbred racing schedule cards are out and list 29 days for the State Fairgrounds meet at Lincoln. Lincoln will race six days a week (Monday through Saturday) for the four weeks in August and Tuesday-through-Saturday the first week (July 26-30).

General manager Henry Brandt reports clubhouse seats in the new air-conditioned club area are selling quickly and he could use even more room.

The new structure is expected to significantly boost the average daily handle to near the $600,000 level, if not higher.

From the why can't I pick ponies as well as I pick awards — In the recent balloting for the Eclipse Award winners, I correctly selected all but one of the horse winners. If I could do as well at the track...

Latest inflation news: The Daily Racing Form has increased its price to $1.25. With most tracks charging 50 cents for a program, it now costs fans $1.75 just to find out who is running. If any other sport charged patrons $1.75 for a program, there would be boycotts. Race track prices go up and up.

Reisdorff, a 15-year-old nationally ranked gymnast, was declared ineligible by the NSAA because she participated in a regional meet five days after Nebraska practices began. Under a rule of the NSAA, an athlete is prohibited from outside competition during the high school season in that sport.

Kentucky cagers said eligible

Atlanta (AP) — Dr. Boyd McWhorter, commissioner of the Southeastern Conference, said Sunday he did not think Kentucky's basketball team would be ineligible for the conference championship because of probation assessed against the school by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

"I would have to study it (the NCAA order), but if there were no sanctions on basketball, I don't think it would affect their eligibility," McWhorter said in a telephone interview from Dallas.

The SEC imposed legislation last year making teams on NCAA probation ineligible for the conference championship.

The NCAA placed Kentucky on two years probation Sunday, citing violations in its football and basketball programs.

However, the basketball team wasn't specifically barred from post-season appearances or television appearances. Those sanctions were placed on the football team for the 1977 season.

The penalties also included reducing football scholarships by five for the next two years and basketball scholarships by two for each of the probation years.

Kentucky is favored to win the SEC title in basketball. The Wildcats had won 16 straight games, six this year, before being upset 70-68 Saturday night by Utah.

The Wildcat football team will face North Carolina in the Peach Bowl on Dec. 31 — a post-season battle that wasn't affected by Sunday's NCAA ruling.

Lincolnite wins crown

The Nebraska School of gymnastics hosted the second annual Nebraska invitational gymnastics meet at the women's PE building Saturday.

In Class 1, the Wichita gymnastics club took first place with a 209.70 score, with Nebraska second at 208.80.

For Nebraska, Terri Furman won the all-around with a 70.85 and the floor exercise with an 18.50 score. She placed second in vaulting with an 18.50.

Kim Grabowski was second in the all-around (70.35), first in the uneven bars (17.60) and second in floor exercise (17.90).

In Class 2 Wichita again took first place. Nebraska finished fifth, led by Lisa Domina who was third in all-around (61.95), first in vaulting (17.25), second in balance beam (16.45) and first in floor exercise (18.10).

In Class 3 the Edina gymnastics Association of Minnesota finished first, with Nebraska fifth. Joanie Sander led Nebraska with a 9.0 in vaulting.

UCLA aware of Bear

Memphis, Tenn. (AP) — Alabama Coach Bear Bryant is well known for trying to "out-psyche" his football opponents by down playing the Crimson Tide's readiness to play.

But Bryant's opponent in the Liberty Bowl Monday night showed Sunday that he is well aware of the Bear's tactics.

"The other night Coach Bryant told my wife, Andrea, that she was young enough to be my daughter," said UCLA coach Terry Donahue at a news conference Sunday.

"I knew at that point we were about to be had," The youthful Donahue and the legendary Bryant appeared side-by-side for about 75 newsmen for the traditional pre-game news conference.

And true to tradition, the coaches concentrated more on levity than they did on the business before them Monday night.

The coaches' entrance triggered a barrage of strobe lights as photographers attempted to capture the two men together on film.

Throwing his trademark checked hat on the table, Bryant turned to the photographers and said:

"Ya'll be sure and get my hat in the picture. I get 48 cents for each one we sell." One reporter asked the coaches if their teams were ready to play.

"I've been in this business a long time," Bryant said. "I can't ever tell. Many times I've thought our team was ready, and we went out and played poorly."

Donahue, with a deferential nod toward Bryant added, "I've been in this business a short time, and I can't tell either."

Bryant, with a barely straight face told the newsmen he was surprised when he found out his Liberty Bowl opponent was to be the University of California at Los Angeles. That was a reply to those who have suggested Bryant has played a major role in bowl match-making in recent years.

"The reason I'm so nervous is that I thought UCLA was the University of Central Louisiana," Bryant declared. "I didn't help arrange this game." Both coaches said their injury situation would have little effect on the nationally televised game.

Donahue expressed some worry about his Bruins might find it difficult facing Alabama's wishbone offense.

Bryant voiced worry about UCLA's speed and balance.

"They have much more speed than anyone we've played," Bryant said.

Dallas' Jordan to end career

Dallas (UPI) — Middle linebacker Lee Roy Jordan, a mainstay of the Dallas Cowboys' defense, Sunday said he would retire, ending 14 years of professional football.

"I'm going to look at some offers and see what I'm going to do in the future," Jordan said following his team's 14-12 NFC playoff loss to the Los Angeles Rams.

"I intend to stay in business in the Dallas area. I have a business in Alabama, but I want to stay in Dallas."

Jordan, who at 6-1, 220 pounds, was once considered too light to play middle linebacker, has anchored the Dallas defense since he was drafted No. 1 out of Alabama in 1962.

Jordan had hinted throughout the season that this would probably be his last. The Cowboys had been grooming former defensive lineman Randy White as his replacement.

Defensive back Mel Renfro, a 13-year veteran with the Cowboys, has been expected to make a similar announcement. Renfro, a perennial All-Pro, has played sparingly the past two seasons due to injuries. Sunday against the Rams he did not play a down.

Across the stadium in the visitor's locker room, Rams' defensive tackle Merlin Olsen, who is winding down a 15-year career, had his retirement announcement delayed for at least another week.

"I was terribly proud of the way we played tonight and this team is making it harder and harder for me to retire," he said. "It looks like I have a few more games ahead of me."

Upset follows McGuire

United Press International
If Marquette stuck to the appropriate script Saturday night, they would have won one for Al McGuire.

But the second-ranked Warriors improvised once too often and dropped a 78-75 decision in overtime to Louisville in their first game since coach McGuire unexpectedly announced his retirement at the end of the season.

"I don't think the announcement had anything to do with it," said McGuire of the Warriors' first loss in five games this year. "If anything, it would be an asset rather than a liability."

Louisville's Ricky Gallon hit four free throws in overtime as the Cardinals boosted their record to 4-2 and handed Marquette its first loss at home since 1974.

The score was tied 67-67 at the end of regulation time after Marquette's Butch Lee missed a foul shot with no time remaining that would have given the Warriors the victory. Earlier, Lee had evened the score with a jumper with 19 seconds left in regulation time.

Marquette held a 69-68 lead in overtime, but Gallon was then fouled twice and made three free throws to put the Cardinals ahead to stay.

"I just personally feel Louisville is a lot better than we are. I honestly do," said the 46-year-old McGuire, now in his 13th season with the Warriors. "They're a super ball club. We'll be representative but we won't set the world on fire."

Wesley Cox led Louisville with 20 points and Griffith added 19. Lee hit a career-high 30 for Marquette.

In other games involving Top 20 teams, No. 1 Michigan routed Kent State 102-66, No. 3 Kentucky was upset by Utah 70-68, No. 8 Arizona lost to Detroit 70-68, No. 9 Cincinnati clobbered St. Louis 86-53, No. 10 UCLA battered Tulsa 110-85, No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas punished Idaho 135-78, No. 12 Wake Forest defeated UNC Asheville 84-73, No. 13 Maryland edged Appalachian State 76-74, No. 14 Clemson took Stetson 78-64, No. 18 Minnesota walloped Vermont 96-61 and No. 20 Oregon whipped Los Angeles State 87-56.

Rickey Green scored 25 points, including 20 in the first half, as top-ranked Michigan unleashed its' running game to destroy Kent State and boost its record to 4-0. The Wolverines, who led by as many as 40 points, were also sparked by Phil Hubbard and Joel Thompson with 19 each. Kent State was paced by James Collins with 18.

Third-ranked Kentucky failed to capitalize on Marquette's loss when Utah's Earl Williams hit a jump shot with one second left to help snap the previously unbeaten Wildcats' 16-game winning streak. Williams' shot helped Utah capture the Kentucky Invitational Tournament, but Kentucky played the game minus two starters — Mike Phillips and Jay Shidler — who were temporarily suspended by coach Joe Hall for training violations. Jeff Judkins topped Utah with 24, while Buster Matheny added 14. Rick Robey led the Wildcats with 19.

Gary Yoder scored 18 points, Mike Jones 16 and Steve Collier 15 to pace ninth-ranked Cincinnati past St. Louis for the Bearcats' seventh straight win.

David Greenwood posted career highs of 31 points and 23 rebounds to power 10th-ranked UCLA past Tulsa. Roy Hamilton added 19 points. Brad Holland 16 to boost the Bruins' record to 5-1. Tulsa was led by Teko Wynder with 28.

Glen Gondrezick scored a game-high 23 points and five team-mates were in double figures as 11th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas sacked Idaho to lift their record to 6-1. Eddie Owens and Reggie Theus hit 18 each for Las Vegas, while Craig Stahl paced Idaho with 20.

Steve Sheppard scored 18 points and Larry Gibson and Brad Davis 14 apiece as 13th-ranked Maryland held off Appalachian State. Maryland, which led by as much as 20 in the second half, upped its mark to 6-1. The Mountaineers, now 5-3, were paced by Walter Anderson with 18 points.

Kentucky hit with probation

Kansas City (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association placed the University of Kentucky on a two-year probation Sunday, citing numerous violations in the conduct of its football and basketball programs.

The NCAA, in a release from its headquarters here, said the sanctions were tempered by the Southeastern Conference school's cooperation in the investigation.

"It is likely that more severe penalties would have been imposed," Arthur R. Reynolds, chairman of the Infractions Committee, was quoted as saying.

The penalties include prohibiting the football team from appearing on television during the 1977 season and trimming the school's football scholarships during the first year of probation to 25, five fewer than allowed under NCAA legislation. The football team is also prohibited from appearing in post-season competition following the 1977 season.

In addition, Kentucky will be allowed to award only three new basketball scholarships, two fewer than normally allowed, during the next two academic years.

"The Committee on Infractions found numerous significant violations in this case involving a variety of NCAA rules and regulations, and considered it to be a most serious case requiring meaningful penalties which have been imposed," Reynolds said.

In a lengthy summary of the case, the NCAA said Kentucky representatives offered high school prospects various gifts and inducements, including cash, clothing, free transportation, the use of automobiles, trips to Las Vegas, lodging, theater tickets, and, in one instance, a race horse.

The summary also indicated parents of several prospects were given improper inducements, including free round-trip transportation to the school's home football games in Lexington.

The probation runs from Dec. 9, 1976 to Dec. 9, 1978.

Blair boosts Buff program

United Press International
Rebuilding the University of Colorado basketball program is a long term job but first-year coach Bill Blair seems to have found some short term answers.

Blair has the Buffaloes hustling on defense and being patient on offense and the result has been a five-game winning streak, the longest string of victories for the Buffs since the 1962-63 season. And a couple of those wins have come against pretty good teams, including a 76-70 win over Long Beach State last Wednesday.

In its only other game last week, Colorado broke the game open late in the first half to rout Fort Lewis College 99-76 as five players scored in double figures, led by Emmett Lewis with 17 points.

"These guys are playing extremely hard and when you play hard you are going to force things to happen," said Blair, who rebuilt the Virginia Military program before coming to Colorado last spring. "And these guys are excited about winning and that helps them work a little harder."

Starting only one player over 6-4, Blair knows his team won't outbreed many opponents so the hustle is important. So far the Buffs have been forcing an average 25 turnovers a game while they have given up the ball less than 15 times a game since season-opening losses at New Mexico and Texas-El Paso.

Blair's crew, which lost four forwards before the season even started, gets its toughest test of all this week when it travels to Washington for a game Tuesday.

First-year coach Lynn Nance has been doing quite a rebuilding job at Iowa State himself. With wins over California, 78-70, and Arizona State, 79-65, last week the Cyclones have already equalled last year's total of three wins for the season. The only disappointment for Iowa State last week was an 85-64 loss to unbeaten intrastate-rival Iowa on Saturday.

Architecture students plan park on Platte

By J. L. Schmidt
Star Staff Writer

Plans for a 100-mile-long regional park along the Platte River are nothing new.

But a group of graduate students at the University of Nebraska College of Architecture has developed a new plan for individual sites along the river, incorporating bits and pieces of studies done by a trio of governmental agencies over a 15-year period.

Under the direction of Prof. Dale Gibbs, 14 students created maps and models of a proposed Schramm Center/Jotan Regional Park. The project is named after a late university professor and an Ojibwa Indian chief immortalized in the writing of Washington Irving.

The project is based on the nucleus provided by the Gretna Fish Hatchery, which had operated on the banks of the Platte since 1883. The hatchery was closed in 1974. The Schramm tract, an adjacent 330 acres, has been acquired through the will of the professor and is being eyed for development under his stipulation it be used for educational and recreational activities.

Gibbs explained that the project, called a "problem" for the students, was vitally important because the "majority of the state's population is within two hours' drive of the site, yet only 12% of the state's parks are in the immediately accessible area."

The park, if it ever materializes, will stretch from Fremont to Plattsmouth. An "abundance of vegetation, oak and ash trees" will be preserved, according to the students.

The plan, Gibbs said, will "sensitize the area to man's treatment." Preparation of a 24-page report, models of possible buildings and shelters, cutaway models of land elevations, and numerous charts and slides showing soil samples were the first steps in the plan.

Students presented the entire package in an hour-long session with representatives of natural resource districts, the Department of Roads and the Game and Parks Commission.

"This is our approach," Gibbs told the group. "What happens to it is up to you."

Death interrupts attempt of man, woman to remarry

Omaha (AP) — "You can't count on your health holding up," said Robert E. "Hoot" Gibson, Omaha recreation coordinator, who prepared to bury his former wife.

The ravages of a brain tumor and cancer had ended the attempt of the Omaha couple to remarry — an attempt that got as close as having a priest and witnesses at the bedside.

Thinking back to the divorce after 17 years of marriage, he said, "the lawyer said he couldn't understand it. No one was mad at anyone. He said he never saw a divorce like it."

An outdoorsman, Gibson said he had reached that "certain time in life when a man thinks he should be doing lots of things." Mrs. Gibson accepted the idea, as she wanted to be her own boss.

As the months went on, Gibson said, both realized that divorce was ridiculous. They talked of remarrying but decided to wait a while "to make sure."

Mrs. Gibson then began getting headaches and he took her to a physician. He said, "She seemed better after brain surgery (last July) but she never really got well."

Mrs. Gibson returned home. For two months she was active. Gibson said all the time they talked of remarrying, but both were busy and things came up. The illness worsened and she was hospitalized again.

Last Tuesday the physician called and said they would have to hurry the ceremony. He got a license, two witnesses including a son and with ring went to the hospital.

"We couldn't perform the ceremony. She went into a semicomatose. You have to be alert to be married," he said. The next day she died.

Mrs. Gibson will be buried Monday, with her former husband and four children present.

Failure to get remarried "was the biggest disappointment of my life. It was my own fault for stalling. We thought we'd have time. She went downhill so fast."

Ted batters town in Australia

Brisbane, Australia (UPI) — Tropical Cyclone Ted's winds of more than 100 miles per hour battered the small town of Burketown on the northern coast of Australia Sunday night while the entire population of 250 barricaded themselves inside a hotel, the Australian Broadcasting Commission reported.

First reports from the town, about 1,110 miles northwest of Brisbane, said some buildings were unroofed and trucks were overturned.

All the native huts on Mornington Island, an aboriginal mission 70 miles northwest of Burketown, were blown down in 125-M.P.H. winds, ABC said. Police declared the island in the Gulf of Carpentaria a disaster area.

Physicians who maintained radio contact from Mount Isa, about 275 miles inland, said Mornington Island's 700 inhabitants gathered at a hospital, one of five buildings left intact.

Two nurses at the hospital reported no serious injuries, a spokesman said.

Police in Townsville, 720 miles north of Brisbane on Australia's East Coast, said the air force will fly a Hercules transport aircraft over the island early Monday to drop tents, blankets, food and medical supplies.

They said the island's airstrip is not expected to be able to take conventional aircraft landings for at least eight days.

A forecaster with the Brisbane Weather Bureau, Bob Adamson, said the cyclone was as strong as Cyclone Tracy, which devastated Darwin on Christmas Day 1974 and killed 65 people.

Carson walks off with Georgie

Las Vegas, Nev. (AP) — Johnny Carson, star of NBC's "Tonight Show," walked off with the Georgie award Sunday as he was named "The Entertainer of the Year" by the American Guild of Variety Artists (AGVA).

Carson won the honor in a poll of AGVA's 8,000 members and was presented with the coveted statuette during AGVA's seventh annual awards show at Caesar's Palace.

The show, which was hosted by Jackie Gleason, was videotaped and will be nationally televised by CBS on Jan. 16.

Previous winners of the Georgie, which is named in honor of the late showman George M. Cohan, include Frank Sinatra, Bob Hope (twice), Liza Minnelli, Sammy Davis Jr. and Ben Vereen.

David Brenner was named AGVA's male comedy star of the year, while Nancy Walker won the female comedy star award.

Barry Manilow was voted best male singer; the Captain & Tennille, the best vocal team, and Edye Gorme won the female singer award.

John Denver won the country singing award.

Lola Falana was named best song-and-dance star, with Jim Henson's Muppets earning honors as the best novelty act.

Lawrence Welk and his orchestra were honored as the best instrumental act. Benji took the title as the best animal act and Natalie Cole, daughter of the late Nat "King" Cole, was named the best rising star of the year.

In addition, Edgar Bergen was given a special award for "distinguished entertainment of the American public for more than 50 years."

Judges to talk over policy of paying for publication

Omaha (UPI) — Douglas County district judges this week plan to discuss their policy of paying the Daily Record, Omaha's legal newspaper, for publishing court findings in civil cases.

Paul Hickman. As of Dec. 1, the municipal court had paid an estimated $19,000 for publication of its civil cases.

The 12 district judges have found nearly $16,000 annually is being paid in public funds for publishing the legal notices. The judges originally voted to end the payments, but the issue will be discussed again at a judges' meeting Tuesday.

Daily Record publisher, A. H. Henningsen, said the federal courts and the State Supreme Court told him years ago they had no provision for paying and thus their records are printed as a service to their subscribers.

If those courts which are paying stopped, Henningsen said, "I'd ask them to reconsider." Henningsen is a personal friend of most of the judges and several district judges have vacationed at a cabin he owns near Estes Park, Colo.

Henningsen said the judges pay for the cabins "as a matter of judicial ethics."

"I don't think we can 'buy' anyone with the cottages," Henningsen said. "It's sort of a reciprocal courtesy because the judges have included me in many of their functions."

"If one's going to pay, they all ought to pay or none ought to pay," said Municipal Judge

Smokestack to save trees

The Yankee Hill Brick Manufacturing Co. is building a 160-foot smokestack in an attempt to carry fluoride it produces over the pine trees in nearby Pioneers Park.

Construction on the $30,000 stack began a month and a half ago because a City-County Health Department study indicated the fluoride was burning the pine needle tips and turning them dark brown. The department reported three trees north of the plant were killed and 273 were heavily damaged.

The new stack, 130 feet higher than any other at the plant, should be completed by mid-January.

Parrott was busier than Jesse James

Stillwell, Okla. (AP) — There were 20 of them. In Oklahoma, Arkansas, Missouri and Kansas.

Charles Parrott spoke casually of the bank robberies as if he were chatting about the weather.

Jesse James would have taken notice. He robbed but 11.

Charles "Pretty Boy" Floyd robbed probably only six.

Parrott described himself as a "coward bank robber" who struck only in small towns with few policemen.

Hitting those banks, he said, was "like opening a box of Cracker Jacks — you never knew what you were going to get."

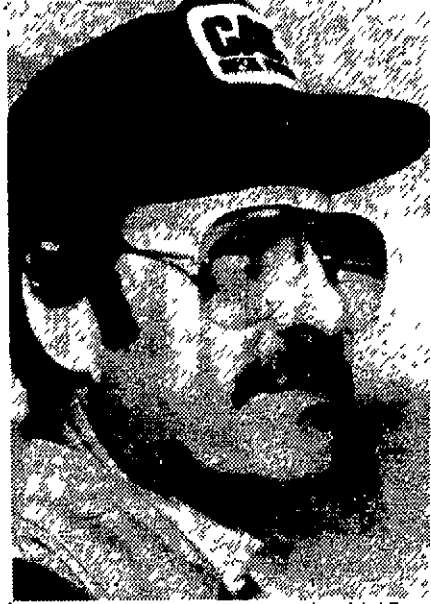

As for getting caught, that was "like driving a car — sooner or later you're bound to have a flat."

Parrott, 42, an Adair County, Okla., native, now is free to talk of the robberies because they're legally stale. Past the five-year statute of limitations. Too old to prosecute.

Free, also, because Parrott has been paroled from a federal prison in Kansas where he served seven years of a 20-year attempted bank robbery sentence. It was one of two convictions in a career spanning more than a decade and a "take" estimated at $265,000.

Why bank robbery?

"Things just happened," said Parrott. "My mom didn't raise me to be no bank robber." He got started in 1958 when he was a bootlegger. He lost a $10,000 load of bonded whisky to authorities in Tulsa and another

Associated Press

Parrott robbed 20 banks.

bootlegger stole $5,000 from him.

"I guess that put me on the verge of taking something back," Parrott recalled. He and a friend tried unsuccessfully to hijack the bootlegger-thief.

They regrouped the next day in Pineville, Mo., where both agreed it would be easier to rob a bank than take on the thief again.

The pair hit the McDonald County bank about noon on a Friday in May 1958 — Charlie Parrott had started his career.

Parrott became well known in Adair County, one of the poorest in far eastern Oklahoma. Interviews around the county confirm that Charlie Parrott had a tendency to help the down-and-out.

He got the electricity turned back on in one shack, made a furniture payment for another, provided groceries where there weren't any and "loaned" $420 to a farmer about to lose his place.

At Christmastime, he handed out toys and clothing he bought from a small grocery store with stolen bank money. He took Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners to jail inmates.

"Sometimes I wonder if I wasn't trying to buy off some of my meanness," Parrott said. "I never wanted the people to think I was a hoodlum."

The "meanness" appeared at banks in Oklahoma, Arkansas, Missouri and Kansas.

Parrott swears his biggest and last bank robbery occurred Nov. 29, 1968, at the State Bank of Hartshorne, Okla., when he got $42,000.

Since his release from prison last April 16 after a seven-year stay, Parrott has testified under oath that he pulled the Hartshorne robbery, not another man who is serving time for it. A court decision on whether to free the man is pending.

Parrott now works as foreman of a crew that winterizes houses free for the poor under a federally funded program. His wife is a juvenile probation officer.

Naturally, Parrott has proved a thorn in the side of the FBI. Their dealings with him ranged from court testimony to frequent visits to his home here and spot checks on him as far away as Mexico and Alaska.

For a time, one of the bureau's resident agencies in Oklahoma accepted collect telephone calls from Parrott. He was, according to a brief-lived agreement with the FBI, simply letting them know where he was each time he learned of a bank robbery.

Parrott once wrote to a friend: "There really isn't any money in robbing banks. I have little to show for it. If I hadn't given my family a little, I would have nothing."

It was a butchered bank burglary attempt at the Carney State Bank in March 1960 that finally netted authorities a 20-year sentence against him. Two men used a pickup truck and a board to batter down the front door, but the Carney case to this day baffles some.

It just wasn't Charlie's style.

And did Charles Parrott really rob 20 banks? "I have no doubt about that at all," said U.S. Atty. Richard Pyle at Muskogee. "The FBI once told me he was believed to be implicated in 28, 29 or even 30 bank robberies."

Will Parrott rob again?

"No," Parrott replies. "Everybody thinks I will, but I won't."

"I'm just now enjoying life. Those times when I was robbing banks seem like a waste of time."

BB-gun vandals go on shooting spree

Vandals apparently cruised around the south and east parts of Lincoln Saturday night, breaking windows in cars and houses with a BB gun.

Sixth automobile windows were broken, with property damage estimated at $3,312, according to police reports.

The breakages followed a rough arc from 17th and Neb. 2 eastward, then northward between 52nd and 54th, to northeast Lincoln.

Several cars in parking lots at the 27th and Neb. 2 shopping center and the Cooper-Lincoln Theater, 52nd and O, were damaged.

In addition, approximately $1,000 worth of windows in homes and public buildings were broken Saturday night.

A $400 plate glass window in the gymnasium at Nebraska Wesleyan University was shattered. Windows in the Game Room at 3860 South, a mobile home and five houses were also broken.

Lincoln homes struck in rash of vandalism, thefts

Small thefts and vandalism plagued several Lincolnites Friday and Saturday nights, according to police.

Strings of Christmas lights were stolen from trees or porches at seven houses. A large floodlamp was stolen from one yard.

From another house a flag was stolen.

One resident reported that someone had ripped approximately 50 shingles from the roof of his house and thrown them to the ground.

One reported that somebody had thrown oil all over his redwood fence, ruining it.

At another home, a vandal broke the front door glass, then threw a burning newspaper through the door.

In addition to numerous broken windows, automobiles were the victims of other crimes. Two cars were covered with raw eggs. Two car owners reported tires stolen from their parked cars. One reported a tankful of gasoline siphoned, one a battery stolen, and one an ornament stolen from the car's hood. Another reported tires slashed.

One angry motorist told police that someone had dumped metal shavings into his car's oil filter tube, causing damage to the engine.

All on a weekend in Lincoln.

Car hits Holiday Inn

A Ceresco man's car punched a hole in a wall at the Holiday Inn, 5250 Cornhusker Hwy., Saturday night, causing an estimated $4,000 damage to the building.

John Burkland, 67, told police that he was parking his car when his foot slipped from the brake pedal onto the accelerator, sending his car forward into the building.

Burkland's car sustained $200 damage to grill and front end, police said.

Burglar apparently takes drugs from Frank's Drug

A burglar broke into Frank's Drug, 3615 S. 48th, Sunday night, taking what appeared to be an unknown amount of drugs.

The burglar was seen carrying a white drawer from a medicine cabinet away from the store, police said.

Police are looking for a white male, in his 20s, about 5 feet, 9 inches tall, 150 pounds, wearing a red stocking cap.

An unknown quantity of drugs were stolen Friday night from Family Drug at 6891 A, police reported.

The burglars apparently entered by breaking a front door glass. Various drugs and an undetermined amount of money were reported missing.

Sparks set shingles afire

Sparks escaping from a chimney set fire to wooden shingles on a house Sunday at 2240 N., causing considerable damage to the roof.

The house is owned by Don Wilson. The sparks came from a Franklin stove, firemen said.

Mafia said directing business loan swindles

(c) New York Times
Los Angeles — Detectives in six Western states say they have uncovered a Mafia-directed, nationwide economic crime organization that they say has swindled businessmen out of millions of dollars and then moved in to take over and control some of the businesses that borrowed money from the group.
Several minor participants in the organization have been arrested so far, but investigators say they believe the number of people involved in the operation may run into the hundreds.
They said that in some cases, officers and other employees of banks had participated in the swindles. One investigative source said detectives had established that a bank in Phoenix — and possibly another in Denver — had been completely taken over by organized crime. The number of banks that investigators believe were "rigged" could exceed 100, they said.
"We suspected that organized crime was involved in land fraud and other economic crime, but I think this is the first time where we have put together a case where we are reasonably sure organized crime has infiltrated legitimate businesses," said Lonzo McCracken, a Phoenix detective who is generally regarded as one of the nation's most sophisticated police specialists on white-collar crime.
"From the information we have from a number of sources, it's nationwide and organized crime operates in a supervisory role," said John Hornbeck, chief of the criminal justice division of the Colorado attorney general's office. He is also head of that state's Organized Crime Strike Force.
Although he declined to be specific, other sources said they believed the Carlo Gambino crime organization of New York was heavily involved in the operation and that its earnings apparently were funneled through a Las Vegas accountant who in the past is known to have been associated with aiding Meyer Lansky, the organized-crime figure.
Information gathered by investigators also indicated that organized-crime figures from Las Vegas, Miami, St. Louis and other cities were participating in the scheme, which to some extent represents a variation of an old-fashioned Mafia line of business — loan sharking.
Asked if anyone knew how much money had been lost in the swindles, Hornbeck said: "It obviously runs into the millions. But I don't think anybody, including the FBI, which is just getting into this, has any idea of the magnitude."

The wide geographic scope of the operation has prompted investigators from Arizona, California, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico and Utah to pool information and meet periodically to coordinate their investigations. Victims of the swindles have been identified in at least 20 additional states, including New York, officials said.
Several investigators said they believed the operation was the largest example they had found of organized economic crime — a species of crime that McCracken described as "the art of appearing to give value to a worthless piece of paper."
The most common swindle operated by the group, investigators said, was a so-called "advance loan fee scheme."
Businessmen who need money, but cannot borrow it from a bank or other conventional source, are bilked by swindlers who promise to obtain a loan for them. Then the swindlers give them a fraudulent loan commitment or letter of credit that appears to guarantee a loan in exchange for a fee, usually one per cent of the loan.
Initially, fulfillment of the commitment is delayed by stalling — and finally, the victim discovers that the promise of a loan is worthless.
"I think the average swindle is $5,000 to $10,000, but some have gone over $25,000," said Capt. Jerry Kimmell, chief of the Phoenix police intelligence unit.
Albert L. Bonney, of Virginia Beach, Va., told investigators that he had paid $10,000 for a loan commitment from the Euro-American Funding Corp., a Denver company that claimed to have assets of $100 million. Police say the company's financial statement was fraudulent and that it had virtually no net worth. Bonney lost his $10,000.
In another case, according to a search warrant affidavit prepared as part of the investigation, the Sunbeam Baking Co., of Stockton, Calif., paid $700,000 to a Phoenix firm for a promised $10 million loan that was never fulfilled. In another, Nicholas Micala of Phoenix lost $9,000 to a man who promised him — fraudulently — that he could arrange a $300,000 loan from a pension fund.

Last of the bell-ringers

Custodian Charlie Cook lays a fond hand on the bell he's rung so many times but which he will no longer at William and Mary College in Williamsburg, Va. The college has phased out the last of the bell-ringers and replaced him with a machine. It was decreed in the college's royal charter in 1693 that the bell would signal the start and end of each class period.

Pig thought man's killer

Flagstaff, Ariz. (UPI) — Coconino County sheriff's deputies said Sunday that a 300-pound domestic pig apparently attacked and killed an 80-year-old man on his farm in a remote area of northern Arizona.
The victim, Ellis Firl Stock, 80, was found dead Saturday in the pig's pen at the farm at Canes Bed near the Arizona-Utah border. Deputies said one of Stock's feet was stuck in the gate, leading them to believe he may have been trying to escape the animal.
Stock was last seen alive Wednesday and it was not known when he died.
Authorities said Stock's body was severely mutilated by the pig. An autopsy was ordered to determine the cause of death.

Carter to ban the hard stuff

New York (AP) — President-elect Jimmy Carter says he intends to ban hard liquor at White House functions.
Asked by People magazine if he planned to return to the wine-only policy it said was in effect until the tenure of John F. Kennedy, Carter replied: "That is my present intention. Most of the presidents have not served hard liquor at receptions."

Easter is date

Hollywood (UPI) — Twentieth Century-Fox will release "Raggedy Ann and Andy," a full-length animated movie feature, next Easter.

Prisoners release one

Florence, Italy (UPI) — Rebellious prisoners who blockaded themselves in a cell block with seven guards released one of their hostages Sunday in what officials described as a goodwill gesture.
An estimated 240 inmates of Murale Prison took the seven guards hostage Saturday to protest plans by prison officials to transfer six inmate leaders to other jails.
In releasing guard Vincenzo Martiniello, the inmates were responding to appeals by prison officials "to make a gesture of good will that will be taken with maximum consideration."

Carter to name Bell, Kreps to high posts

Plains, Ga. (AP) — President-elect Carter will name former federal appellate Judge Griffin B. Bell as his choice for U.S. attorney general and has offered a high-level post to economist and educator Juanita M. Kreps, sources near the Carter camp said Sunday.

Bell, 58, born in nearby Americus, is a partner in an Atlanta law firm with Charles Kirbo, one of Carter's closest advisers. He served 15 years on the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals before resigning March 1 to return to the firm.

Bell also was the chief of staff from 1959 to 1961 for Georgia Gov. S. Ernest Vandiver, who told the opening session of the state legislature in 1960 he would resist school desegregation in Georgia by "every legal means and remedy available to us."

Dr. Kreps, 55, currently vice president of Duke University, reportedly has been considered by Carter for appointment as either secretary of commerce or labor or the deputy spots in those departments.

She has served on two federal manpower-policy commissions, been in college education for 20 years and has authored books on economics and the job status of women in the marketplace.

Carter will name three Cabinet nominees during a nationally broadcast news conference at 11 a.m. EST Monday, aides announced Sunday night.

Earlier Sunday, Carter said that completion of background checks by the Federal Bureau of Investigation is delaying the announcement of some of the persons he has decided to name to top posts.

"I know who's going to be appointed, but I don't know when they are going to be announced," Carter told reporters who spoke with him after Sunday worship services at the Plains Baptist Church.

So far, he has named four Cabinet choices, three top White House aides and his nominee for ambassador to the United Nations. All have been men; all but one, white.

In a statement Sunday, feminist leader Gloria Steinem said that she was "amazed" by Carter's statement Saturday "that his supposed difficulty in finding women for his Cabinet is due to their high corporate salaries or inability to leave their husbands. Most of the women in America, including many of those superbly qualified for the Cabinet, are neither rich nor docile."

The Ms. Magazine founder said that neither Carter nor his top aides have personally consulted any of the dozens of women suggested for top posts by the National Women's Political Caucus and other feminist groups or with the organized women's movement "as he has with black, environmental, consumer and other major groups."

"I am left with the fear that Carter is taking mainly corporate advice and that when it comes to women he is talking only to men," she said.

Carter has met twice in recent weeks with both Bell and Dr. Kreps, who is a director of a number of major corporations.

Carter said Saturday that a problem with finding women appointees is that "when a woman has become a pre-eminent leader in the business and professional world, she can demand and receive superb salaries."

He met with Bell at his home here Saturday and interviewed him earlier in the week at the governor's mansion in Atlanta. At that time, Bell was accompanied by Sen. James Eastland, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and president pro tem of the Senate.

Among men on whom speculation has centered for other Cabinet positions are Rep. Bob Bergland, D-Minn., for agriculture secretary, and Joseph A. Califano Jr., for secretary of health, education and welfare.

Dear Lincoln,

Thanks for your support.

Lincoln Alliance

A Tribute to...
Christmas Day!

Whether you're young or merely young in heart, the coming of Kris Kringle brings a thrill not equalled by any other holiday! Dad and Mother are busy for weeks ahead...holding secret conferences and planning what each loved one will get on Christmas morning. Yet Christmas means infinitely more than the exchanging of gifts. It commemorates the first chapter of the Greatest Story Ever Told...and it should be a time of rejoicing, for it is the anniversary of Christendom. So a Merry Christmas to you all...and may your wishes be abundantly fulfilled this year and every year!

Anne cited for speed

London (AP) — Princess Anne has been charged with driving 90 miles an hour in a 70-m.p.h. zone in her Rover sedan, police said Sunday.

The 26-year-old princess is alleged to have topped 90 m.p.h. on the Derbyshire section of the M1 motorway in the English midlands. With her at the time was her husband, Army Capt. Mark Phillips, and her personal police bodyguard.

The incident happened Nov. 27 when the royal couple was on a visit "somewhere in the north," said a spokesman at Buckingham Palace.

A Derbyshire police spokesman said: "I'm not sure whether a summons has been issued yet or which court the proceedings will take place at. But I can confirm that court proceedings are pending."

There was public criticism in 1972 when police didn't prosecute her for driving offenses.

Three killed in riot over smuggled coffee

Nairobi, Kenya (AP) — Rioting broke out over a load of smuggled coffee at a market place on the Kenya-Uganda border Sunday, leaving at least three persons dead and 40 injured, police said.

The fighting — with machete-type knives, clubs and stones — was between two rival groups laying claim to coffee smuggled in from Uganda, said a police spokesman.

He said the three dead were Somalis, who had muscled in on what has become a major smuggling racket at the border, some 300 miles northwest of here.

Late Sunday night the official Kenya news agency put the death toll at 10, but there was no police confirmation. The agency added that Kenyan officials have ordered all non-residents of the market area to "get out of the district within 24 hours."

Police said low-grade Ugandan coffee is being smuggled in bulk to Kenya, where racketeers mix it with high-grade Kenyan coffee before it goes to regular auction sales here.

The spokesman said the situation at the border market was "tense" and reinforcements had been sent in from other districts.

Nationalists bomb wine cellar

Bastia, Corsica (AP) — Seven masked Corsican nationalists dynamited a French wine cellar early Sunday, causing an estimated $400,000 in damage, police said.

They also blew up a barn belonging to a French farmer, injuring a worker.

The attacks were part of an escalating campaign by Corsican nationalists to gain a greater degree of autonomy.

Compensation problem can get sticky

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

A farmer who tosses a letter he receives from some state or federal agency into the wastebasket could be violating the law. Carried far enough, he might pay a large fine and spend a year in jail.

There are many state and federal laws that cover farmers who employ workers for even a part of a year that they may not know about.

One of the stickier problems a farmer can face — but probably doesn't know about — is workman's compensation insurance. Most farmers feel they are exempt under the law, but if they tinker with off-farm activities like custom combining, sell seed corn or feed or haul something for a neighbor, they may qualify.

Raymond T. Atwood, Jr., agency legal council for the Court of Workman's Compensation, gets hundreds of questions about farmers and the laws, but because he is an officer of the court, he is in a difficult position when it comes down to a specific case.

"I am happy to come out to any farm meeting in the state to explain as much about the law and who it covers as possible, but in the end, farmers ought to visit with their insurance agents and attorneys to make sure they are operating within the law," he said.

Insurance of this type is being offered by a number of companies in Nebraska, including some that are affiliated with farm organizations.

"Be very sure what you are getting is workman's compensation insurance, not liability insurance. In many cases the health insurance you have on an employee, will not cover injuries on the job that should be covered by workman's compensation insurance," he said.

Just to add to the confusion, farmers should understand that court decisions have gone both ways on whether a farmer is covered.

One group of farmers operating a commercial hay grinding operation found they were covered. A cooperative threshing organization, however, was found to be a true farming operation and is exempt, at least in one case. Few farmers would regard the two operations as different. Hay grinding isn't all that different from threshing.

The court also describes a carpenter or a bulldozer operator as a non-farm laborer even if he also does farm work. There are so many factors in any one case that the only safe thing to do is to get a legal opinion in writing from an attorney who has researched the law.

Atwood said such a letter might not solve your problem if you end up in court, but the court would probably look favorably on a letter as a reasonable effort to find out if you were covered.

"We find out about violations in a number of ways," Atwood said. "The most common is when someone gets hurt and a doctor fills out an injury report. Another way is when a competitor informs us that he is at an economic disadvantage because he must pay the insurance when a person in a similar business doesn't."

Farmers often toss a letter inquiring about an injury into the wastebasket under the impression that it is a mistake that doesn't apply to them. "Ignoring a letter can result in a fine, and imprisonment for the farmer under the law," Atwood warned.

Under some cases the son, brother, father or even the wife of a farmer might be deemed an employee. If a farm is a family corporation, it can also be that the man who owns the corporation is an employee under the law.

Farmers concerned about this law, as well as sales taxes, unemployment insurance, minimum wages, Social Security payments for employees, pesticide permits, Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) and Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) regulations, should be talking to their law-makers about them.

"If farmers learn about these various things that affect them, they can ask for changes in the laws that better suit their needs. Trying to ignore them isn't going to work," Atwood said.

Atwood noted bills were introduced in the last session of U.S. Senate to extend the workman's compensation law to more farm occupations and are likely to surface again.

"Another thing farmers should know is that they cannot make a legal agreement, even in writing, with an employee to avoid the law. Some people think they can avoid the law that way, but it doesn't work," he said.

"I will be happy to come to any farm meeting anywhere on my own time to explain the law as far as I am able. I can't offer legal advice because I am a member of the court, but I can explain the law," he said.

Atwood noted that even dropping out of the program once you are in it has its problems. "You must drop the insurance and then you must post notice in a place where your employees can see it for a full year after you drop the insurance. This qualifies only if you are exempt from the law or become exempt because of a change in your operation," he said.

Spotlight On Agriculture

After a careful search, we have discovered the ideal Christmas gift for your agricultural friends who have everything. Obviously it must be something they don't really want or need but can hardly ignore.

The starter buffalo herd kit available from a Texas department store clearly fills the bill. For only $11,750 you can acquire a pair of buffalo calves, six months old and of opposite sexes. You do have to gift wrap them yourself, but they come with a free card saying "give us a home for our buffalo to roam."

One gift anyone can give at his own price is a gift certificate for beef available from the Nebraska Beef Foundation at Gibbon. Members of the Nebraska Cow Bells and the Nebraska Feeders Auxiliary are selling them. A ham or a turkey is also nice gift, or even a box of exotic cheeses.

These are quite agricultural in nature and a heck of a lot easier to gift wrap than a starter buffalo herd kit.

Fremont man named Poultryman of the Year

A poultry man who has "exhibited outstanding leadership behind the scenes" has been named 1976 Poultryman of the year by Nebraska Poultry Industries, Inc.

Lyle F. Clark, 58, of Fremont was recognized before more than 250 persons attending the group's annual banquet. He is now production manager of the poultry division of JMJ Feeds of Schuyler, which leased the former Wagner Mills last year.

From 1964 until assuming his position with Wagner Mills, Clark was a flock supervisor for the Fremont Hatchery.

Also honored by NPI were two deceased turkey producers, Carl C. Gangwish Sr. of Shelton and Arthur D. Morrill of Stromsburg, who were inducted into the Nebraska Poultry Hall of Fame.

Woman raped by 3 men

A Lincoln woman told police Sunday that she was taken to an apartment building in west Lincoln early Sunday morning and raped by three men.

The woman, 37, described her assailants as two black males and a white male.

Weekly Grain Report

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

There are three possible actions by the new administration that could greatly strengthen grain prices on the farm.

First and most obvious would be to increase the loan rates on grain. Second would be to announce that farmers can extend their loans for an additional year to establish a farmer-owned grain reserve. Third would be to announce a loan program designed to encourage farmers to build more on-farm storage capacity.

The stories circulating about all three possibilities are a factor in farmers' determination to hold onto grain for a while.

If there is an increase in the loan rate, it is more likely to come in feed grains than in wheat. Wheat got a larger share of the increased rates than feed grain did under the Ford pre-election boost in support loans.

Wheat farmers might be aided by an announcement of controls on the planting of spring wheat or even on the 1978 wheat crop.

Farmer's will probably put a lot more grain under loan after Jan. 1 even without an increase in the loan rate.

Wheat is likely to be tied to whatever loan rates we have for the next two years, but there is still some room for improvement in corn, grain sorghum, oats, rye, barley and soybean prices.

I still think soybeans will top $7 at local elevators before the next harvest, barring government embargos, of course.

Milo ought to top $3.75 a hundred and could reach $4. Corn could reach $2.50 with the help of an increase in the loan rate, cold winter and improved livestock prices.

Inmate missing; fails to return from furlough

An inmate was reported missing from the Penal Complex Sunday night after he failed to return from a furlough.

William G. Eutzy, serving a 3-to-5-year term for forgery, was on furlough for a few hours visiting friends in Lincoln, prison authorities said.

Eutzy, 36, was described as a white male, 6 feet tall, 150 pounds, with blue eyes and brown hair. When last seen he was wearing a brown sports coat and pants and a yellow shirt.

He may be driving or riding in a 1970 or 1971 white Ford pickup truck with Kansas plates, a prison official said.

Eutzy, sentenced for forgery from Lancaster County, was also serving a concurrent 5-year federal term for mail theft.
